Journal of African Languages and Linguistics

Editor: MAARTEN MOUS, Leiden University, the Netherlands

The JOURNAL OF AFRICAN LANGUAGES AND LINGUISTICS was founded in 1979 and has established itself as an important refereed forum for publications in African linguistics.

The JOURNAL OF AFRICAN LANGUAGES AND LINGUISTICS welcomes original contributions on all aspects of African language studies, synchronic as well as diachronic, theoretical as well as data-oriented. It is the only linguistic journal that provides an extensive section with positively critical book reviews written by specialists in the field of African linguistics. The journal further contains a list of recently published books on African languages and linguistics, which many libraries find to be of use for the acquisition of books.

Distribution: worldwide

Of interest to: linguists, anthropologists, sociologists, Africa specialists, social psychologists and ethnologists
