Staudinger's Commentary now available as a part subscription or individual volumes

In over 100 years, J. von Staudinger's commentary on the Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch (German Civil Code) - BGB - has become the most comprehensive and well-established commentary on the BGB. The work is being continuously expanded, revised and improved by a team of at present 139 commentators and 18 editors. An innovative marketing strategy means that this comprehensive commentary, which in its totality is more up to date than any other, can now be purchased by every lawyer according to their specific needs.

The high-quality leather-bound volumes with gold tooling continue to be available as a complete subscription to the all-round lawyer, who has to be up to date in all areas, but they are now also available as a partial subscription or individual volumes. The partial subscription is intended for "specialists" - family lawyers, e.g. inheritance specialists or lawyers heavily involved in tenancy matters. Those lawyers seeking specific information of great depth and accuracy in a limited specific area of civil law can just buy the individual volume which meets their needs. In this way, lawyers can make individual and flexible choices about the extent they wish to benefit from new Staudinger publications.

In addition, there are special reduced-price introductory packages valid until 31.03.2004 for the areas of family law and law of inheritance.
