The microfiche edition of the Russian Biographical Archive (RBA) contains biographical articles from 162 reference books amounting to 322 volumes published between 1827 and 1995. By including a considerable number of extremely rare source works, very difficult to access or no longer accessible to the public, the RBA represents an extraordinary biographical treasure, in some cases offering the only remaining information on thousands of individuals from the history of the Russian Empire.

The Russian Biographical Archive contains biographies of individuals who have shaped politics, economy, religion and culture in the Russian Empire from the beginning of its eventful history to the end of the Romanov dynasty in 1917.

The Russian Biographical Index (RBI) is an alphabetically arranged list of the 85,470 persons contained in the RBA and thus gives access to the 119,782 biographical articles in the Archive. In addition to the main entries, the RBI contains cross-references that have been completed with biographical dates in order to better facilitate the use of this index.

In order to guarantee a comfortable and consistent search standard within the K.G. Saur World Biographical Information System the RBA uses the transliteration system of the „Regeln für die alphabetischen Katalogisierung“. As a special search help the Russian Biographical Index also includes a complete list of the names of all 85,470 individuals according to the Russian alphabet. Together with the name it includes biographical dates and locations in the RBA.

As the RBI is an Index to the Russian Biographical Archive, the user can tell at a glance whether or not any particular individual appears in the Archive, and if so, where the information is to be found. The Index specifies every individual's name with his/her biographical dates and profession. References as to where the entries are to be found in the Russian Biographical Archive plus the abbreviated titles of the biographical sources used are also given. A special list contains the key to these abbreviations.

Primarily, the Russian Biographical Index serves as a register to the RBA. Thanks to its highly condensed form it greatly aids the search for and selection of individuals listed in the Archive.

Furthermore, as a work in its own right, the Index represents a highly valuable tool for biographical research: information given by the Index leads to the immediate identification of the person in question as well as his/her historical period. The Russian Biographical Index allows its user direct access to the biographical source, both the original work in printed form and the microfiches of the RBA.

It therefore constitutes an essential reference work for anybody interested in the history of the Russian Empire, whether for private, genealogical or academic purposes.
