process in particular, is mirrored in the Baltic Biographical Archive. Series II. People judged to be of historical significance were also reconsidered, from a national perspective, by Baltic biographers. In the Archive, their counterparts can often be found in the ideologically influenced biographies of the large encyclopaedia dating from the Soviet era. Thus, users of the Archive can establish with speed and precision not only serious differences, but also aspects unexpectedly shared by a number of biographies. The efficiency which the Archive lends to biographical research, results from the careful cumulation of reproductions of the original biographies, common to all K.G. Saur's biographical archives.

Series II of the BaBA contains approximately 110,000 articles about some 65,000 people from about 95 biographical source works. The latest research findings of the biographical history of the Baltic region are presented, and some new areas of biographical research are included, such as foresters, jazz musicians and persons of regional significance. The biographical source works evaluated were published during the period from 1940 to the year 2003, with the largest part being made up of editions published in the 1990s.

On completion, Series II of the Baltic Biographical Archive will be a unique biographical source work, comparing biographies from a variety of historical perspectives with the latest research, and thereby remaining a standard work on the entire Baltic region for some considerable time to come.

A cumulated index will provide ease of access to the biographical entries of the Baltic Biographical Archive. Series II, when the archive is finished. This index will bring together the articles from the Baltic Biographical Archive I and Series II.

The Baltic Biographical Archive (BaBA) contains 154,900 biographical articles on 107,600 persons from 218 source works in 244 volumes, published between 1772 and 1995. It covers individuals from the 9th century to the middle of the 1990's. Through a number of source works which are either extremely rare, not accessible to the public, or only accessible with great difficulty, besides source works not available in libraries at all (corporation albums, typescripts), the BaBA represents an extraordinary fund of biographical information providing, in many cases, the only surviving biographies of thousands of people in the Baltic area. Beyond the pantheon of great names, the user is presented with biographies of individuals who else might be forgotten. This unique combination reflects the varied history of this region with all its cultural, linguistic and historic sociological interconnections. German-Baltic individuals, Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians are taken into account. The Archive also lists other nationals who shaped the historic course of the Baltic region and includes the biographies of Baltic individuals living in exile.
