IT TAKES TWO TO WRITE A BIOGRAPHY: the person writing it and the person being written about. In fact, there are usually lots of other people involved in the process too, all of whom shape the final work. This includes writers of previous books and articles about the biographer's subject, which may prove very useful to a later author. In the list of sources at the back of this book, you can find references to all of the books, articles, magazines, and websites about Astrid Lindgren's work to which I am indebted, accompanied by an index and an overview of Astrid Lindgren's works published in Danish.

I owe a huge thank-you to everyone who helped me track down other types of material: first and foremost to Astrid Lindgren's bibliographer Lena Törnqvist, a tireless source of advice and information. She taught a Dane to navigate Astrid Lindgren's archive at the National Library of Sweden, which was entered onto UNESCO's Memory of the World register in 2005. Thanks are also due to Britt Almström, stenographer at the Swedish Riksdag, who helped me decipher some of Astrid Lindgren's notebooks written in shorthand. Likewise, I'm deeply grateful for the support I received from Anna Eklundh-Jonsson at the Regional State Archives at Västena, Bruno Svindborg, research librarian at the National Library of Denmark in Copenhagen, and Elin Algreen-Petersen, senior editor for children's and young adults' books at Gyldendal.

When working on a biography, you're always reliant on other people's goodwill, generosity, and willingness to contribute their specialized knowledge and skills. Thanks are due to Tom Alsing, Barbro and Bertil Alvtegen, Urban Andersson, Ida Balslev-Olesen, Malin Billing, David Bugge, Ning de Coninck-Smith, Hélène Dahl, Gallie Eng, Belinda Erichsen, Jens Fellke, Jacob Forsell, Lena Fries-Gedin, Eva Glistrup, Klaus Gottfredsen, Stefan Hilding, Jesper Høgenhaven, Sven Reiner Johansen, Anneli Karlsson, Kerstin Kvint, Jeppe Launbjerg, Kathrine Lilleør, Annika Lindgren, Jørn Lund, Carl Olof Nyman, Nils Nyman, Elsa Trolle Önnersfors, Johan Palmberg, Gunvor Runström, Anja Meier Sandreid, Lisbet Stevens Senderovitz, Margareta Strömstedt, Helle Vogt, and Torben Weinreich.

A special thank-you goes to Saltkråkan AB for its practical and technical support, not least with many of the illustrations in the book, to Kjell-Åke Hansson and the staff at Kulturkvarteret Astrid Lindgrens Näs in Vimmerby, a cultural center dedicated to Astrid Lindgren, and to Jakob Nylin Nilsson at Vimmerby Library. Thank you to the Danish Astrid Lindgren translator Kina Bodenhoff, to Jenny Thor at the Gyldendal Group Agency, and to my editors, Vibeke Majnlund and Johannes Riis.

Finally, I'm grateful to the National Arts Foundation, the Gangsted Foundation, and the Danish-Swedish Arts Foundation for financial support, and to my indefatigable first reader, Jette Glargaard. And last but not least, thanks are due to Karin Nyman—Astrid Lindgren's daughter—who thought writing this book was a good idea. Without her interest, insight, and active cooperation in the form of a long series of conversations and correspondence over the past year and a half, it would not have been possible.
