INSTITUTE OF SOUTHEAST ASIAN STUDIES, Singapore

The Institute of Southeast Asian Studies was established as an autonomous organization in 1968. It is a regional research center for scholars and other specialists concerned with modern Southeast Asia, particularly the multi-faceted problems of stability and security, economic development, and political and social change.

The Institute is governed by a twenty-two member Board of Trustees comprising nominees from the Singapore Government, the National University of Singapore, the various Chambers of Commerce and professional and civic organizations. A ten-man Executive Committee oversees day-to-day operations; it is chaired by the Director, the Institute's chief academic and administrative officer.

The ASEAN Economic Research Unit is an integral part of the Institute, coming under the overall supervision of the Director who is also the Chairman of its Management Committee. The Unit was formed in 1979 in response to the need to deepen understanding of economic change and political developments in ASEAN. The day-to-day operations of the Unit are the responsibility of the Co-ordinator. A Regional Advisory Committee, consisting of a senior economist from each of the ASEAN countries, guides the work of the Unit.

EAST-WEST CENTER, Honolulu

The East-West Center is a public, non-profit educational institution established in Hawaii in 1960 by the U.S. Congress. The Center's mandate is "to promote better relations and understanding among the nations of Asia, the Pacific, and the United States through co-operative study, training, and research".

Some 2,000 research fellows, graduate students, and professionals in business and government each year work with the Center's international staff on major Asia-Pacific issues relating to population, resources and development, the environment, culture, and communication. Since 1960, more than 25,000 men and women from the region have participated in the Center's co-operative programs.

The Resource Systems Institute (RSI) undertakes policy studies on issues related to the economic growth and development of the Asia-Pacific region and on the implications that growth holds for U.S. relations with the region. Research conducted by RSI is grouped under four major programs — Development Policy, Energy, Minerals Policy and Special Studies. The Development Policy program analyses the economic performance of developing Asian countries and examines the effectiveness of their development policies in today's ever-changing and interdependent economic and political environments. The vital role of resource development is stressed in the work undertaken by the Energy and Minerals Policy programs. The Special Studies program comprises research on rural transformation and marine resource policy.
