CHRISTIAN INTERCULTURE
Moving beyond descriptions of European-derived norms that have existed for hundreds of years, books in the World Christianity series reflect an understanding of global Christianity that embodies the wide diversity of its identity and expression. The series seeks to expand the scholarly field of world Christianity by interrogating boundary lines in church history, mission studies, ecumenical dialogue, and interreligious dialogue among Christians and non-Christians across geographic, geopolitical, and confessional divides. Beyond a mere history of missions to the world, books in the series examine local Christianity, how Christianity has been acculturated, and how its expression interacts with the world at large. Issues under investigation include how Christianity has been received and transformed in various countries; how migration has changed the nature and practice of Christianity and the new forms of the faith that result; and how seminary and theological education responds to the challenges of world Christianity.

OTHER BOOKS IN THE SERIES:
Krista E. Hughes, Dhawn B. Martin, and Elaine Padilla, eds., Ecological Solidarities: Mobilizing Faith and Justice for an Entangled World
Aminta Arrington, Songs of the Lisu Hills: Practicing Faith in Southwest China
CHRISTIAN INTERCULTURE

Texts and Voices from Colonial and Postcolonial Worlds

Edited by Arun W. Jones

The Pennsylvania State University Press
University Park, Pennsylvania