Illustrations

Figures

3.1 Democratic percentage of major-party identifiers in polls fielded between 1937 and 1952  44

3.2 Predictors of economic conservatism, 1936–52  54

3.3 Economic conservatism in the average state in each region, relative to the national average, 1936–52  56

3.4 Conservatism by region and presidential vote, among whites only  57

3.5 Relationship between Southern states’ economic conservatism and percent white, percent unionized, and percent Republican, before and after 1939  59

3.6 Trends in white Southerners’ domain-specific conservatism, 1936–52  61

3.7 Sample size for labor and nonlabor questions, by year  63

4.1 Ideological evolution in the U.S. House and Senate  76

4.2 The ideological evolution of Senator Theodore Bilbo (D-MS), according to DW-NOMINATE scores and a dynamic IRT model  77

4.3 Percentage of different groups in Congress voting antilabor on key union-related roll calls  80

4.4 Ideological diversity in the U.S. House and Senate, 1931–62  84

4.5 Probabilities that the median legislator on economic issues is a member of different groups, in the House and the Senate, 1931–62  88

4.6 Percent of Southern Democrats more conservative than the median and veto pivots in the House and Senate, 1931–62  90

4.7 Senators’ predicted and actual roll-call votes on the motion to recommit the FLSA (July 31, 1937)  93
LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

4.8 Senators’ predicted and actual roll-call votes to override President Truman’s veto of the Taft–Hartley Act (June 23, 1947) 97

5.1 Year-specific box plots of white turnout in congressional primaries and in primaries or presidential elections, whichever is greater 115

5.2 Competition in Southern Democratic primaries 119

6.1 Representation on economic issues by region and political domain, 1936–52 146

6.2 Trends in the economic conservatism of the white public, U.S. House, and U.S. Senate, by region and party, 1937–52 149

6.3 Cross-sectional responsiveness by congress and region, 1936–52 153

Tables

6.1 Cross-sectional responsiveness by region and chamber, 1936–52 155

6.2 Cross-sectional responsiveness to the imputed median income of the selectorate, 1931–62 (South only) 157

6.3 Dynamic responsiveness by region and chamber, 1936–52 159