Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

Embodied Brains 7
Urban Inhabitations 9
Moving People 12
Vital Sociology 14
The Plan of the Book 18

1 Modern Cities, Migrant Cities 21

Mentalities of Migration 22
Seeing the City 26
Chicago: Proud and Vigorous 30
Philadelphia: Striving, Palpitating 39
How Do They Really Live? 45
From Migrant Biopolitics to Migration Studies 53
The Migrant City Today 60

2 Migration, the Metropolis, and Mental Disorder 62

Psychiatry Encounters Migration 64
Degeneracy, Eugenics, and Migration 66
Migration and Mental Health Today 73
Refining ‘Migration’ 76
Mental Health and ‘the Slums’ 79
Crushed Dreams or First Steps 84
CONTENTS

3 The Metropolis and Mental Life Today—Shanghai 2018 86

Migrant Nation 87
Migrant Labor 92

China: A Mental Health Crisis? 102
‘Stress’ and the Psy Complex 107
Measuring and Managing Migrant Mental Health 110

4 Everyone Knows What Stress Is and No One Knows What Stress Is 118

General Adaptation Syndrome 120
Locating Stress 124
Rat Cities, City Rats 126
The Meaning of Urban Stress 132
Stress and Beyond: Toward the Urban Brain 137

5 The Urban Brain 140

The Urbanicity Effect 141
Understanding Urbanicity—To a New Style of Thought? 145
Seeing the Urban Brain 148
The Biopolitics of Stress 155
Epigenetics: Beyond the Genetic Program 161
Neuroplasticity: The Modulated Brain 167
The Exposome: An Urban Sensorium 170
Toward a Conception of the Neurosocial City 174

6 Another Urban Biopolitics Is Possible 176

Urban Justice: The Right to the City 178
Of ‘Other’ Urban Spaces 180
Transcorporeal Exposures: Beyond the Binary 183
Opening Our Eyes 185
Mental Maps of the Imagined City 186
Ecological Psychology 188
Niching 192
Contents

Precarious Niching  194

A New Urban Biopolitics?  198

Conclusion: Toward a Sociology of Inhabitation  200

Notes  213

Bibliography   229

Index  259