Acknowledgments

Funding for the research and writing of this book was provided by fellowships from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the Killam Trusts, and the University of British Columbia. I am very grateful for this support.

I also owe a debt of gratitude to President Gordon Johnson and the Fellows of Wolfson College, University of Cambridge, for support given me during a period of research and writing as a research fellow of the College. I would like to thank Harvey Mitchell, W. Alan Tully, Thomas Salumets, Hans Erich Bodeker, Hans Adler, and Allan Smith for helpful critique, comments, and encouragement along the way. Roger Martin of McGill-Queen’s University Press has been a very supportive editor, and Susan Kent Davidson has been a very helpful copy editor: thanks to them and to the others at the press who have been involved in bringing this project to completion. I am also grateful to the anonymous readers who took the time to read and comment upon the manuscript.

I would especially like to thank E.J. Hundert for his long-standing and generous support of my work; this book is dedicated to him. And many thanks to my wife Fran for her encouragement and companionship throughout the long process of research and writing.
