Contents

Acknowledgments ix
Introduction Catherine Potvin and Gilles Seutin xi

1 The Development and Management of Protected Tropical Areas: The Need for a Code of Ethics to Guide Collaborative Research in Africa. A Case Study from the République démocratique du Congo Léonard Mubalama 3

2 Considerations on a Code of Ethics for Conservation Biologists Marie-Hélène Parizeau 12

3 The Scientific Community and the Indigenous Embéra Community of Panama Rogelio Cansari 26

4 Cultural Lenses and Conservation Biology: Collaboration in Tropical Countries Priscilla Weeks, Jane Packard, and Mirella Martinez-Velarde 41

5 Conservation in Action: Assessing the Behaviour of National and International Researchers Working in Madagascar Lala H. Rakotovao, R. Rakotoariseheno, and Chantale Andrianarivo 58
Contents

6 Conservation Biology and Environmental Values: Can There Be a Universal Earth Ethic?
Bryan G. Norton 71

7 The Notion of Effectiveness: Lessons from the Field of International Development
Georgina Wigley and Heather Baser 103

8 Conservation That Makes Dollars and Sense: The Rare Center for Tropical Conservation Work in the Caribbean
Paul Butler and Victor Alleyne Regis 117

9 Conclusion: Blending Universal and Local Ethics: Accountability towards Nature, Perfect Strangers, and Society

Contributors 149