Acknowledgments

This book is a collaborative, decade long effort shared between two colleagues who, for the past six years, have worked on different sides of the Atlantic. We contributed equally to the outcome and share the responsibility for any mistakes that may have been made. Nevertheless, as with any project that has been this many years in the making, we are indebted to numerous people and institutions. Hereby we gratefully acknowledge their invaluable contributions.

From the very beginning our work has received the support of B. Barry Levy, former dean of McGill University’s Faculty of Religious Studies, and Eileen Schuller of McMaster University. Professor Schuller has been a stalwart supporter and graciously accepted our invitation to write a foreword to this book. To us it seems a fitting tribute, as Professor Schuller is also editor of one of the last of the official series of publications of the Dead Sea Scrolls, the Discoveries in the Judaean Desert. She has more than generously shared with us her time and experience and assisted throughout as conduit in establishing contact with Dead Sea Scrolls scholars around the world, who in turn kindly contributed their memories and knowledge. Among them we must first thank Frank Moore Cross who allowed us to interview him in May 2000 about his experiences as a member of the international editorial team in the 1950s. On that same day we were fortunate to spend the afternoon with a wonderful raconteur, the late John Strugnell, editor-in-chief of the editorial team until October 1990. Both men were tremendously kind, patient, and forthcoming in responding to our questions.

Stanley Frost, former director of the History of McGill Project and also former dean of the Faculty of Divinity, shared his memories of the events here described that took place during his tenure at McGill in the 1950s and 1960s; as did Donna Runnals, also former dean of McGill’s Faculty of Religious Studies. Professor Runnals helped arrange the acquisition of papyrus fragments from R.B.Y. Scott who bought them in Jerusalem in the summer of 1955. We would like to thank Ryan Byrne for his input on the matter of their publication in this volume. Our thanks also to Ellen Aitken, McGill’s current dean of the Faculty of Religious Studies – her staunch support of the publication and launch of the book has been invaluable. Peter McNally, current director of the History of McGill Project, has also been a sounding board, mentor, and supporter of our book. Lawrence Schiffman of New York University and George Brooke of Manchester University were helpful in clarifying queries we had at various stages of the project. Emanuel Tov of Hebrew University and John Strugnell’s successor as editor-in-chief of the international editorial team, in addition to kindly responding to our inquiries, helped to arrange invaluable access to the archives of the Israel Antiquities Authority. Our thanks also to Johann Cook of the University of Stellenbosch for his assistance in establishing contact with pertinent role players and for his careful and dedicated reading of a draft of this manuscript; Carla Sulzbach, McGill University, also read and commented on a draft of this manuscript – we are eternally thankful to both for their pointed remarks, innumerable references, and pertinent suggestions.

The staff of the McGill University Archives deserves to be singled out for their hospitality over a period of nine years and their never failing professionalism in managing our queries. The director, Theresa Rowat, the senior archivist, Gordon Burr, and the administrative coordinator, Mary Houde, made the McGill Archives an ideal working environment and this book is largely the result of their enthusiastic cooperation.

We especially thank the editors and staff of McGill-Queen’s University Press, John Zucchi, Joan McGilvray, Joanne Pisano, and Lesley Andrassy. They have made the publication of this book a wonderful experience for both of us. The comments from the press’s anonymous reviewers helped to greatly improve the manuscript.

As may be imagined given the scope of this project, we are highly indebted to archivists and researchers at various institutions around the world for their kind assistance in helping us to verify or track down information. In alphabetical order, we thank Edward Ball of the University of Nottingham, archivist of the British Society for Old Testament Study; Tobias Brinkmann, formerly of the Parkes Institute for the Study of Jewish/non-Jewish Relations at the University of Southampton and now of Pennsylvania State University; Robin Brunelle and Alex Thomson of the archives of the United Church of Canada; Giuseppina Carozza of the Birks Family Foundation; Catreena Hamarneh of the Archaeological Documentation Unit of the Jordanian Department of Antiquities; Kevin Profitt, Lisa Frankel, and executive director, Gary Zola, of the Jacob Rader Marcus Center of the American Jewish Archives; James Rent, archivist for the Basilian Fathers in Toronto; Sandra Rosenstock, general and humanities reference librarian at Princeton University Library; Ayela Sussman and Arieh Rochman-Halperin of the Israel Antiquities Authority; and Helene Vallee of the archives of the Canadian Jewish Congress.

In October 2009 Weston Fields, executive director of the Dead Sea Scrolls Foundation, kindly shared the page proofs of his then forthcoming volume, The Dead Sea Scrolls – A Full History: Volume One, 1947–1960. Although our volume was already in copyediting at the time, his generosity allowed us to correct some errors and to make a few minor additions to the narrative.

For transcribing, scanning, and formatting documents we thank our graduate assistant, Shane Cass, and Laurel Wolfson, librarian of the Hebrew Union College Klau Library in Cincinnati. Stephen Kaufman of Hebrew Union College – Jewish Institute of Religion and Elena Pober assisted us with the translations from Arabic of some of the documentation. Annelize Venter and Nico Benson of the research office at the University of the Free State facilitated annual funding applications to the National Research Foundation (NRF). We would like to thank our student assistants in South Africa, Jean van Biljon and Francois Greeff; the university librarian, Ronet Vrey, and Estie Pretorius and Rothea Pelser at the interlibrary loan department of the University of the Free State, as well as Christo Lombaard at the University of South Africa, for their interest and unwavering assistance in expediting the acquisition of source material at crucial stages in the completion of this book. Carl Pace carefully and thoroughly indexed the book.

Financial support for this project has been generously provided by the office of the president of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, David Ellenson, and by the office of the provost Norman Cohen; the former dean and vice dean of the Faculty of Humanities at the University of the Free State, Gerhard de Klerk and Engela Pretorius, the current dean, Lucius Botes, director of research, Frans Swanepoel; and, also, for a number of years, by the NRF of South Africa. Although this book is based on work supported by the NRF, any opinions, findings, and conclusions or recommendations expressed are those of the authors and the NRF does not accept any liability in regard thereto.

This book has been published with the help of a grant from the Canadian Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences, through the Aid to Scholarly Publications Program, using funds provided by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada.
Permission to publish transcriptions of documents in the McGill University Archives has been granted by the director, Theresa Rowat. Permission to publish papyrus fragments purchased by R.B.Y. Scott has been granted by the Redpath Museum, Montreal. We are grateful to Barbara Lawson, curator of ethnology, for arranging the photography. Permission to publish correspondence from the late G. Lankester Harding and the Jordanian Department of Antiquities has been granted by Fawwaz Al-Khraysheh, director general of the Department of Antiquities, Jordan. Letters and documents from the archival collection of the Israel Antiquities Authority appear courtesy of the Israel Antiquities Authority – permission was granted by Baruch Brandl, archives and library director. Permission to publish transcriptions of the correspondence of Roland de Vaux has been granted by Jean-Michel Tarragon on behalf of the École Biblique et Archéologique Française de Jerusalem. Permission to publish the correspondence of R.B.Y. Scott has been granted by his children: Mary Poapst, John Scott, and the late Gavin Scott. We are grateful to them as well for sharing their memories of their late father and of his colleagues and friends, and for their support of this project. This volume is very much a tribute to the enterprise and academic rigour of their father.

We have made every effort to identify, credit appropriately, and obtain publication rights from copyright holders of illustrations in this book. Notice of any errors or omissions will be gratefully received and correction made in any subsequent editions.

In conclusion, we thank our families, friends and colleagues at McGill University, Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, and the University of the Free State for their continuous encouragement of a project that started out in response to a cursory mention of an obscure link between McGill University and the Dead Sea Scrolls. Our thanks to Jackie Naudé for first drawing our attention to this tidbit of information. And, as always, to Ryan Byrne and Vanessa Sasson, our scholarly companions and loyal friends: thank you.

Finally we thank our spouses. Neither of you were with us when this project began but you have supported us and it as if you had been. We could not be more grateful.
