CONTENTS

Acknowledgments  ix
Introduction  3

1 On the Obsessions of Selfhood: Doctor Faustus and the Dramatization of Consciousness  46

2 The Biogenesis of Ethics and the Challenge of Shakespeare’s Measure for Measure  78

3 On the Emotional Intentionality of Criminal Protagonists: The Yorkshire Tragedy  113

4 On the Systemic Properties of Recollection: Embossed Narratives and the Limits of Memory in Edmund Spenser’s The Faerie Queene and Thomas North’s The Moral Philosophy of Doni  143

5 Crying and the Ambiguity of Shakespeare’s All’s Well That Ends Well  184

6 Toward a Cognitive Theory of Proverbs: The Dialogue of Solomon and Marcolphus  208

7 Romance and the Universality of Human Nature: Heliodorus, Aethiopica and Robert Greene, Menaphon  236

8 Suspense . . . .  263

9 Laughter’s Shortfall: The Aesthetics of Renaissance Tragicomedy, The Witch of Edmonton and The History of James the Fourth  289
10 Cognition, Conversion, and the Patterns of Religious Experience: Francesco Petrarch’s Familiar Letters, IV.1 318

11 Folk Psychology and Theory of Mind: John Marston’s The Fawn 335

Notes 363

Bibliography 445

Index 473