

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book began as a dissertation in the American Studies Program at New York University. I am grateful to my dissertation chair, George Yúdice, for his intellectual verve, unwavering support, and all around geniality. I had the benefit of working with a truly outstanding dissertation committee: Robin D. G. Kelley, Andrew Ross, Danny Walkowitz, and Marilyn Young were each insightful readers and inspiring mentors. I am also thankful to Andrew Ross, Lisa Duggan, Arlene Dávila, and Phil Harper for making the NYU program such a vital and exciting place to pursue engaged critical scholarship.

The American Studies Department at the University of New Mexico has been an exemplary context within which to begin my academic career and to complete the research and writing for this book. It has been my great fortune to have had an extraordinary group of past and present colleagues: Beth Bailey, Amy Brandzel, Amanda Cobb, David Correia, Jennifer Denetdale (a fabulous all-around co-conspirator), Laura Gómez, Jake Kosek, Gabriel Meléndez, Vera Norwood, Michael Trujillo, and Gerald Vizenor. I am especially indebted to Alex Lubin. Thanks also to the tireless effort of our department administrator, Sandy Rodrigue. Beyond my department, I very much appreciate the friendship and intellectual generosity of Sam Truett, Carmen Nocentelli, Jason Smith, Ronda Brulotte, Les Field, Judy Bieber, Brian Herrera, Liz Hutchison, Adrian Johnston, Jeremy Lehen, Leila Lehen, Walter Putnam, Mary Quinn, Beverly Singer, Bill Stanley, Mary Tsiongas, Claudia Valdes, Kathryn Wichelns, and Rich Wood. Many thanks to Clare Daniel, for her diligent research assistance, and to all the incredible graduate students with whom I have had the pleasure of working at UNM.

This book has greatly benefited from the support and encouragement of many friends and colleagues, including Nikhil Singh, Audra Simpson, Enrique Aguilar, Michael Alexander, Joanne Barker, Sophie Bell, Natalie Bimel, Eileen Boris, Neil Brenner, Laura Briggs, Jayna Brown, Kevin Bruyneel, William Fowler Collins, Rosemary Cosegrove, Carlos Decena, Roxanne Dunbar-Ortiz, Joseph Entin, Tanya Erzen, Grant Farred, Julian Go, Mishuana Goeman, Cathy Gudis, Lisa Kahaleole Hall, Christina Hanhardt, Laura Harris, Adria Imada, J. Kēhaulani Kauanui, Richard Kim, Dave Kinkela, Kitty Krupat, Alex Ku, Stephanie Lipkowitz, Stuart Lipkowitz, Andrea McArdle, Pat McCreery, Mireille Miller-Young, Scott Morgensen, Derek Musgrove, Alondra Nelson, Marcelo Montes Penha, Jerry Philogene, Sujani Reddy, Mark Rifkin, Jim Roeber, Emily Rosenberg, Josie Saldaña, Malini Johar Schueller, Micol Seigel, David Serlin, Andy Smith, Julie Sze, Thuy Linh Tu, Penny Von Eschen, Jane Yeomans, and Cynthia Young. The opportunity to present portions of this project at conferences of the American Studies Association, Organization of American Historians, the Harvard Graduate Conference on International History, and International Studies Association provided indispensable feedback. Discerning commentary from Kandice Chuh, Julie Greene, Michael Latham, Craig Murphy, Emily Rosenberg, and Nikhil Singh helped shape this project early on. For the formative inspiration they provided, I will forever be grateful to Rosalyn Deutsche, Douglas Crimp, Hans Haacke, Ron Clark, Peter Hitchcock, and Stanley Aronowitz.

Research funding was generously provided by a number of institutions and organizations. A dissertation fellowship at NYU's International Center for Advanced Studies (ICAS) was invaluable, and it was especially rewarding thanks to the accompanying seminar discussions with Marilyn Young, Koray Çalişkan, Tina Chen, Kim Gilmore, Greg Grandin, Allen Hunter, Rob Kroes, Anna McCarthy, Molly Nolan, Corey Robin, and Robert Vitalis. In addition to ICAS, financial support for this project was provided by a Moody Grant from the Lyndon Baines Johnson Foundation, a Horace Samuel and Marion Galbraith Merrill Travel Grant in 20th-Century American Political History from the Organization of American Historians, an NYU Graduate School of Arts and Sciences Dean's Dissertation Fellowship, the Research Allocations Committee at the University of New Mexico, and a Dean's Summer Research Fellowship from College of Arts and Science at UNM. It was an honor to have been the recipient of the American Studies Association's Ralph Henry Gabriel Dissertation Prize, and I thank the award committee of Kevin Gaines, Priscilla Wald, and Susan Curtis.

This book would not have been possible without the knowledge and gracious assistance of a number of dedicated archivists and librarians. Special thanks go to Joellen Elbashir, Moorland-Spingarn Research Center, Howard University; Allen Fisher, Lyndon B. Johnson Library and Archives; Claire-Lise Benaud, Terry Gugliotta, Ann Massmann, and Beth Silbergleit of the Center for Southwest Research, University of New Mexico; Carolyn Hanneman, Carl Albert Congressional Archives, University of Oklahoma; Mario Ramírez and Pedro Juan Hernández at the Centro de Estudios Puertorriqueños, Hunter College; Margaret Jessup, Sophia Smith Collection, Smith College; Nik Kendzioriski, Center of Southwest Studies, Fort Lewis College; David Klaassen, Social Welfare History Archives, University of Minnesota; Cynthia Lewis, King Library and Archives, The Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change; Susan McElrath and Daisy Njoku of the National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution; Harry Miller, Wisconsin State Historical Society; Kristen Nyitray, Special Collections, Stony Brook University; Becky Schulte, Wilcox Collection of Contemporary Political Movements, Spencer Research Library, University of Kansas; Mary Beth Sigado and Wendy Chmielewski of the Swarthmore College Peace Collection; and Stephanie Smith, Ralph Rinzler Folklife Archives and Collections, Smithsonian Institution. I am also grateful to the remarkable photographers Dick Bancroft, Frank Espada, and Stephen Shames for allowing me to include their important work in this book, and particularly to Robert Houston, for permission to use his magnificent photograph of Resurrection City for the cover of the book.

Parts of chapter 1 were included in "The Attributes of Sovereignty: The Cold War, Colonialism, and Community Education in Puerto Rico," in Imagining Our Americas: Toward a Transnational Frame, edited by Sandhya Shukla and Heidi Tinsman (Duke University Press, 2007). I received helpful feedback on this portion of my chapter from Sandhya and Heidi, as well as the anonymous reviewers for the collection. An earlier version of chapter 2 was published as "On the Internal Border: Colonial Difference, the Cold War, and the Locations of ‘Underdevelopment,’” in Comparative Studies in Society and History 50.1 (January 2008); and I am grateful to Andrew Shryock, David Engerman, and the anonymous readers for their thoughtful criticism, and to Cambridge University Press for permission to include the revised chapter.

At Duke University Press, I wish to acknowledge the steadfast enthusiasm and time devoted to this book by Valerie Millholland, Gisela Fosado, Miriam Angress, Rebecca Fowler, Jeanne Ferris, and Heather Hensley. The close reading and recommendations for revision provided by the anonymous readers for the press improved this book immeasurably.

I wish to thank my family members, including Malcolm Goldstein and Carol Marcy; Marin Goldstein and Pilar Goldstein-Dea; Carol and Sandy Schreiber; and Maddy Schreiber and Blaine Keese.

Most of all, I would like to thank Rebecca Schreiber and Alia Schreiber-Goldstein. My love and appreciation goes to my daughter Alia, who helps me keep in perspective what is most important in life, and is such a kind and wonderful person. Words are inadequate to express my gratitude for everything that Rebecca has contributed to this book and for the joy that she brings to my life.