Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Note on Documentation xi

Introduction 3

PART ONE: THE 1850s

One

- Analysis and Synthesis 15
  - The Hegelian Atmosphere of the 1850s 15
  - Chernyshevsky 16
  - The Contemporary Reception of Tolstoy’s Work 18
  - Tolstoy and Chernyshevsky 19
  - Subjective Reality for the Early Tolstoy 22
  - Tolstoy’s Goethean Realism 26

Two

- The Young Tolstoy’s Understanding of the Human Soul 31
  - Tolstoy, the Psychological Analyst 31
  - Synthesis and the Influence of Rousseau 36

Three

- The First Synthesis: Nature and the Young Tolstoy 50
  - Tolstoy’s Understanding of Nature in the Early 1850s 52
  - A Maturing Philosophy of Nature (Tolstoy and Fet) 53
  - Botkin and the Exploration of the Feelings 58
  - Sterne 62
  - N. V. Stankevich 64
  - Nature, Reason, and the Feelings (“Lucerne”) 68
  - Objective and Subjective Poetry 73
  - The Metaphysics of Opposites and Goethe Again 76

PART TWO: THE 1860s

Four

- Nature and Civilization in The Cossacks 85
  - Natural Necessity in The Cossacks 85
  - The Morality of Self-Sacrifice in the Stag’s Lair 86
  - The Cossack as Savage Man 93
Contents

Five
The Unity of Man and Nature in War and Peace
  Nature and History in War and Peace
  Circular versus Faustian Reason in War and Peace
  The Morality of Nature in War and Peace
  The Importance of Spirit in Wartime
  Reason, Morality, and Nature in the Human Soul
  The Rostovs and “Living Life”
  The Bolkonskys
  Pierre
  “Lyrical Daring” in War and Peace

PART THREE: THE 1870s

Six
From Nature to Culture in the 1870s
  Schopenhauer
  Schopenhauer and Arzamas
  Nature after Schopenhauer
  Linking Happiness and Morality in Anna Karenina

Seven
Drama in Anna Karenina
  The Symposium in the Restaurant
  Anna as Heroine of a Novel
  Anna’s Radical Individualism
  To Judge or Not Judge Anna

Eight
Science, Philosophy, and Synthesis in the 1870s
  The Enduring Importance of Unity for Tolstoy
  Atomism
  Kantian Epistemology
  The Attack on the Individual
  The Denigration of the “Personality”
  The Morally Free Individual in Anna Karenina
  Synthesis and Lyrical Daring Once Again

Conclusion

Notes

Works Cited

Index