CONTENTS

IV. SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS 118

Chapter Five: Aggregative Effects of Personality Characteristics on Political Systems

1. From Personality Structure to Political Structure: Problems of Linkage 123
   - Personality Structures ≠ Belief System 124
   - Underlying Personality Structures and Political Beliefs ≠ Political Behavior 125
   - Psychological Dispositions and Individual Political Action ≠ Aggregate Political Structures and Processes 127

2. Strategies for the Analysis of Aggregation 127
   - "Building up" from Direct Observation of Small-scale Political Processes 128
   - Relating Frequencies of Psychological Characteristics to System Characteristics 133
   - Modifying the Frequency Analysis to Take Account of "Non-additivity" 136
   - "Working Back" from Theoretical Analyses of Systems and Their Psychological Requirements 138

III. Summary and Conclusions 139

Chapter Six: Concluding Remarks 141

1. Recapitulation 142
2. The Emphasis on Ego Defense 146
3. Political Personality as a Dependent Variable: A Normative Application 148
4. Epilogue 152
