

Contributors

Reuven Amitai is Eliyahu Elath Professor for Muslim History at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. His areas of research include the Mamluk Sultanate, the Mongols in the Middle East, processes of Islamisation, and medieval Palestine. From 2010 to 2014, he was Dean of the Faculty of Humanities at the Hebrew University, and from 2014 to 2016, he was a Senior Fellow at the Annemarie Schimmel Kolleg in Bonn. His recent publications include: Holy War and Rapprochement: Studies in the Relations between the Mamluk Sultanate and the Mongol Ilkhanate (1260–1335) (2013); co-edited with Michal Biran, Nomads as Agents of Cultural Change: the Mongols and Their Eurasian Predecessors (2015); co-edited with Christoph Cluse, Slavery and the Slave Trade in the Eastern Mediterranean, 11th to 15th Centuries (2017); and co-edited with Stephan Conermann, The Mamluk Sultanate from the Perspective of Regional and World History: Economic, Social and Cultural Developments in an Era of Increasing International Interaction and Competition (2019). In 2018, he received the degree of doctor honoris causa from the National University of Mongolia.

Thomas Asbridge is Reader in Medieval History at Queen Mary, University of London. He specialises in the study of the Crusades, knight-hood and chivalry, and medieval violence. His major publications include The Greatest Knight (2015), The Crusades – the War for the Holy Land (2010) and The First Crusade: a New History (2004).

Julia Bray has taught Arabic language and medieval literature at the universities of Manchester, Edinburgh, St Andrews and Paris 8-Vincennes – Saint Denis. She is currently Abdulaziz Saud AlBabtain Laudian Professor of Arabic Literature at the University of Oxford. She works on medieval to Early Modern literature, life writing and society, and on the Arabic history of emotions and has published Stories of Piety and Prayer (2019), the first part of an edition and translation of the tenth-century al-Tanukhi's Deliverance Follows Adversity, in the Library of Arabic Literature.

Paul M. Cobb is Professor of Islamic History and Chair of the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, USA. He is the author of numerous books and articles dealing with the history of the medieval Levant including, most recently, The Race for Paradise: an Islamic History of the Crusades (2014). He is also the translator of Usama b. Munqidh's Book of Contemplation for Penguin Classics.

Anne-Marie Eddé is Emerita Professor in Medieval Islamic History at Panthéon-Sorbonne University in Paris. Her research interests include medieval Arabic sources and the history of Syria from the eleventh to the fourteenth century. She is the author of La principauté ayyoubide d'Alep (579/1183–658/1260), Freiburger Islamstudien, XXI, Stuttgart, 1999, and Saladin, Paris, Flammarion, 2008, repr. 2012 (English translation, by Jane Mary Todd, 2011).

Taef El-Azhari is Professor of Islamic and Middle Eastern History at the University of Helwan, Egypt. He received his doctorate in Middle Eastern history from the University of Manchester. His interests, both in research and teaching, focus principally on Turcoman–Kurdish social–political history and the Crusades. His most recent books include Queens, Eunuchs and Concubines in Islamic History (Edinburgh University Press, 2019) and Zengi and the Muslim Response to the Crusades (2016).

Kenneth A. Goudie received his PhD in 2016 from the University of St Andrews for a thesis entitled 'The Reinvention of Jihad in Twelfth-century al-Sham'. He is now a postdoctoral research fellow at Ghent University. His current research focuses on the historical writings of the fifteenth-century Qur'an exegete and historian, Burhan al-Din al-Biqā'i.

R. Stephen Humphreys is Professor Emeritus in History and Islamic Studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Before coming to Santa Barbara, he taught at the University of Chicago and the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He is the author of From Saladin to the Mongols: the Ayyubids of Damascus, 1193–1260 (1977), Islamic History: a Framework for Inquiry (1991) and Mu'awiya ibn Abi Sufyan: from Arabia to Empire (2006), in addition to other books and articles. He has been a visiting member of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey, and a visiting fellow at All Souls College, Oxford.

Christopher MacEvitt is Associate Professor of Religion at Dartmouth College. His first book, The Crusades and the Christian World of the East: Rough Tolerance (2009), examines the ways in which Frankish rule and religious difference gave rise to what he calls 'rough tolerance', a mode of coexistence distinctive to the era of the Crusades. He has just completed a book on the narratives about Franciscans who died as martyrs in Islamic lands in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, arguing that the stories shape expectations of martyrdom and the image of Islam as the Franciscan Order grappled with accusations of heresy and controversies over poverty.

Thomas F. Madden is Professor of History and Director of the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies at Saint Louis University. His books include Venice: A New History (2013), Istanbul: City of Majesty at the Crossroads of the World (2016), The Concise History of the Crusades (2014) and Enrico Dandolo and the Rise of Venice (2003). He is a Fellow of the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation, the American Council of Learned Societies and the Medieval Academy of America.

Alex Mallett is Assistant Professor at the Waseda Institute for Advanced Study, Waseda University, Tokyo. He is the author of Popular Muslim Reactions to the Franks in the Levant (2014) and editor of Medieval Muslim Historians and the Franks in the Levant (2014). He is currently working on an edition and translation of the Ayyubid period in al-Maqrizi's chronicle al-Suluk, as part of the Bibliotheca Maqriziana project.

Suleiman A. Mourad is a historian of Islam and the Middle East and Professor of Religion at Smith College. He is also Associate Fellow at the Nantes Institute for Advanced Study (France). His publications include The Intensification and Reorientation of Sunni Jihad Ideology in the Crusader Period (2013) and The Mosaic of Islam (2016).

A. C. S. Peacock is Professor of Middle Eastern and Islamic History at the University of St Andrews. His research focuses on the history and intellectual history of the premodern Islamic world and Islamic manuscripts. His publications include Early Seljuq History: a new interpretation (2010), The Great Seljuk Empire (2015) and Islam, Literature and Society in Mongol Anatolia (2019). He has also edited Islamisation: Comparative Perspectives from History (2017).

Jonathan Phillips is Professor of Crusading History at Royal Holloway, University of London. He is the author of several books including The Life and Legend of the Sultan Saladin (2019) and The Second Crusade: Extending the Frontiers of Christendom (2006) and, with Mike Horswell, he edited Perceptions of the Crusades from the Nineteenth to the Twenty-first Century: Engaging the Crusades I (2018). He is a convener of the MA in Crusader Studies at Royal Holloway and, with Professor Benjamin Kedar, the co-editor of the journal Crusades.

Lutz Richter-Bernburg was Chair of Islamic Studies at the University of Tübingen from 2000 until his (mandatory) retirement in 2010. Previously he held a variety of research and teaching positions at Los Angeles (UCLA), Göttingen, Aleppo, Bonn, New York (Columbia), Berlin (Free University), and Leipzig. His publications include studies in Graeco-Islamic medicine and science, Ayyubid historiography and the intellectual history of formative and medieval Islam.

Bogdan C. Smarandache finished his undergraduate studies at McGill University in 2011 and his MPhil at St Catharine's College, University of Cambridge, in 2012. Bogdan is now a PhD candidate at the Centre for Medieval Studies in the University of Toronto and a former recipient of the Joseph-Armand Bombardier Graduate Scholarship. He recently finished his thesis on Christian–Muslim relations and the conditions of religious minorities in the Eastern Mediterranean under the supervision of Professor Mark Meyerson, Professor Linda Northrup and Professor Michael Gervers.

Angus Stewart is Lecturer in Middle Eastern History at the University of St Andrews, and the author of The Armenian Kingdom and the Mamluks: War and Diplomacy during the Reigns of King Het'um II (2001). His research focuses on the eastern Mediterranean area in the Ayyubid and early Mamluk era, looking especially at the arrival of the Mongols in the region.

Luke Yarbrough is Assistant Professor in the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures, University of California, Los Angeles. He is the author of Friends of the Emir: Non-Muslim State Officials in Premodern Islamic Thought (2019) and the editor and translator of 'Uthman ibn Ibrahim al-Nabulusi, The Sword of Ambition: Bureaucratic Rivalry in Medieval Egypt (2016).