

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank those who have helped me in many ways, large and small, in the development of this book and the doctoral work on which it is based. I owe a debt to Burkhard Schafer for his support on all matters academic, stretching back to my stint as his research assistant during the LLM programme at Edinburgh, and of course for his supervision of my doctoral work. Discussions with and comments from many people from various quarters have helped develop this text in uncountable ways, for which I am hugely grateful: my thanks in particular to Irina Baraliuc, Roger Brownsword, Tatiana Duarte, Gianmarco Gori, Mireille Hildebrandt, Emilie van den Hoven, Daithí Mac Síthigh, Paulus Meessen, Claudio Michelon, Judith Rauhofer, Manuel Sabin, and Burkhard Schafer. I also want to thank my colleagues – indeed, friends – in and around the project ‘Counting as a Human Being in the Era of Computational Law’ (COHUBICOL), who over the past couple of years have helped me in lots of ways to get to this point, especially so given the many challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic. A particular thank you must also go to Mireille Hildebrandt, for the opportunity to carry on working in this fascinating and crucially important field. Lastly, but of course not least, thank you to Hannah for your support and kindness, and for your cheerful acceptance of all this.
