Acknowledgements

First and foremost, this book would not have been written without Jane de Gay. Jane’s supervision, mentorship, and example have shaped my practice; in research, teaching and beyond. I have benefited immensely from the scholarly community at Leeds Trinity University and especially the Leeds Centre for Victorian Studies, and the supervision, support and mentorship provided by Juliette Taylor-Batty, Rosemary Mitchell and Helen Kingstone. I am grateful to Leeds Trinity University for sponsoring the PhD studentship that enabled me to undertake the initial research for this book; and to the PhD community at LTU, especially Tom Breckin and Ruth Clemens, for their stimulating company and collaboration. I have also benefited from the generosity of the academic community, through the advice and mentorship of colleagues, support in accessing resources, and through travel bursaries for the conferences ‘Virginia Woolf and the Writing of History’ (2018) in Rouen and ‘Modernism in the Home’ (2019) at the University of Birmingham.

I am very grateful to my parents for their encouragement and faith in me. My sister’s unwavering support means the world to me. Finally, thank you to James and the hedgehogs for sharing this experience with me.
