Andrew Atherstone is Latimer Research Fellow and Tutor in Church History at Wycliffe Hall, Oxford (UK), and a member of Oxford University’s Faculty of Theology and Religion. His research focuses upon the history of evangelicalism and Anglicanism in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. His recent books include, as co-editor, Making Evangelical History: Faith, Scholarship and the Evangelical Past (2019) and Transatlantic Charismatic Renewal, c.1950–2000 (2021).

Jane Barter is Professor of Religion and Culture at the University of Winnipeg (Canada). She has published several works of constructive theology, including Thinking Christ: Christology and Contemporary Critics (2012) and Lord, Giver of Life (2007). She also researches at the intersection of feminist theory and Continental philosophy of religion.

Anthony Bateza is Associate Professor of Religion and an affiliated faculty member in the Race and Ethnic Studies programme at St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota (US). A specialist in Martin Luther and political theology, his research examines human agency, questions of race and identity, as well as moral formation, with particular interest in the virtue tradition and its liberative potential in the work of social justice. Recent works include ‘Reclaiming the Legacies of Martin Luther and James Baldwin in Fighting Racism’, in Forgotten Luther II: Reclaiming the Church’s Public Witness (2019) and ‘Reconciling Rapacious Wolves and Misguided Sheep: Law and Responsibility in Martin Luther’s Response to the Peasants’ War’, in Political Theology 19:4 (2018).

Daniel Castelo is the William Kellon Quick Professor of Theology and Methodist Studies at Duke Divinity School (US). He is currently pursuing questions in the fields of pneumatology and Latinx theology. Most recently he is co-author of The Marks of Scripture (2019) and co-editor of the T&T Clark Handbook of Pneumatology (2020).

Christophe Chalamet is Professor of Systematic Theology at the University of Geneva (Switzerland). Among his recent publications: A Most Excellent Way: An Essay on Faith, Hope, and Love (2020), and, as editor, The Challenge of History: Readings in Modern Theology (2020). He is currently working on a renewed theology of covenant.

David Grumett is Senior Lecturer in Theology and Ethics in the University of Edinburgh (UK). His expertise includes twentieth-century French Jesuit theology and the liturgy. His books in these fields include Henri de Lubac and the Shaping of Modern Theology (2020),
Paul Hedges is Associate Professor in Interreligious Studies at the Studies in the Interreligious Relations in Plural Societies Programme, RSIS, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. He has previously worked for, or lectured at, other universities in Asia, Europe and North America. He researches, teaches, and publishes widely in such areas as interreligious studies, theory and method in the study of religion, contemporary global religious ideologies and interreligious hermeneutics. He has engaged in work beyond academia with the media, NGOs, faith groups and governments. He has published fourteen books and over seventy papers. His most recent books are Understanding Religion: Theories and Methods for Studying Religiously Diverse Societies (2021), and Religious Hatred: Prejudice, Islamophobia, and Antisemitism in Global Context (2021). He is co-editor of Interreligious Studies and Intercultural Theology, editor-in-chief of the Occasional Paper series Interreligious Relations and sits on the editorial board of a number of other journal and book series.

Christine Helmer holds the Peter B. Ritzma Chair of the Humanities at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois (US), where she is also Professor of German and Religious Studies. Her areas of teaching and research are German intellectual history, theology (including biblical reception, philosophical theology and systematic theology), Luther studies, Schleiermacher studies, critical theory, race and religion in sport, and women in higher education. She is the editor of numerous volumes, recently The Medieval Luther (2020) and Truth-Telling and Other Ecclesial Practices of Religion (2021), and author of Theology and the End of Doctrine (2014; also available in Korean translation), How Luther Became the Reformer (2019) and A Constructive Theology in Conversation with Christians in Taiwan (in Chinese, 2020). She is also the instructor of the free massive open online course (MOOC) ‘Luther and the West’.

Veli-Matti Kärkkäinen is Professor of Systematic Theology at Fuller Theological Seminary, Pasadena, California (US) and Docent of Ecumenics at the University of Helsinki (Finland). A native of Finland, he has also lived and taught theology in Thailand, and continues participating widely in international ecumenical, theological and interreligious work. Among the almost thirty books he has written and edited, the most important projects include a five-volume series titled Constructive Christian Theology for the Pluralistic World (2013–17), which develops a full-scale systematic theology in a critical dialogue with Christian tradition, including global and contextual interpretations, natural sciences and four living faiths. He is a member of the Academy of Sciences in Finland and an ordained Lutheran minister (ELCA).

Kirsteen Kim holds the Paul E. Pierson Chair in World Christianity and serves as the Associate Dean for the Center for Missiological Research at Fuller Theological Seminary, Pasadena, California (US). Her research interests include intercultural theology – especially in India and Korea – pneumatology, theology of mission, and mission studies. She is an editor of the book series Theology and Mission in World Christianity (Brill). Among her numerous publications are A History of Korean Christianity (2015), The New Evangelization (2015) and Christianity as a World Religion, 2nd ed. (2016).
P. Travis Kroeker is Professor in the Department of Religious Studies and the Arts and Science programme at McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario (Canada), where he teaches and publishes in the areas of ethics, literature, philosophy and religious thought. He is the author of Christian Ethics and Political Economy in North America (1995) and (with Bruce Ward) Remembering the End: Dostoevsky as Prophet to Modernity (2001). He has recently published the first of two book projects on political theology: Messianic Political Theology and Diaspora Ethics (2017) and Literary Apocalypse as Political Theology (forthcoming).

Mark Lindsay is the Joan F. W. Munro Professor of Historical Theology at the Trinity College Theological School, in the University of Divinity (Australia). A priest in the Anglican Diocese of Melbourne, he has taught in universities and seminars across Australia, and in England. With a particular interest in Barthian and post-Holocaust theology, he has published three books on Karl Barth, a fourth on the doctrine of election – God has Chosen: The Doctrine of Election through Christian History (2020) – and is currently writing a major biography of Markus Barth.

Rachel Muers was appointed to the Chair of Divinity at the University of Edinburgh (UK) in 2022, having previously held posts at the University of Leeds, the University of Exeter and at Girton College, University of Cambridge (UK). She has published on a range of topics at the intersections of modern Christian theology and theological ethics. Her publications include Keeping God’s Silence: Towards a Theological Ethics of Communication (2004), Living for the Future: Theological Ethics for Coming Generations (2008), Testimony: Quakerism and Theological Ethics (2015), Theology on the Menu: Asceticism, Meat and Christian Diet (with David Grumett, 2010) and Modern Theology: A Critical Introduction (with Mike Higton, 2012).

Angus Paddison is Reader in Theology and Acting Deputy Vice-Chancellor, University of Winchester (UK). His research and writing has focused on the theological interpretation of Scripture and includes Theological Hermeneutics and 1 Thessalonians (2005), Scripture: A Very Theological Proposal (2009) and edited volumes such as Theologians on Scripture (2016).

Tracey Rowland holds the St John Paul II Chair of Theology at the University of Notre Dame (Australia). From 2014 to 2019 she was a member of the International Theological Commission, and in 2020 she won the Ratzinger Prize for Theology. Her recent publications include Catholic Theology (2017), Portraits of Spiritual Nobility (2019) and Beyond Kant and Nietzsche: The Munich Defence of Christian Humanism (2021). She has also edited a collection of essays on The Anglican Patrimony in Catholic Communion (2021). Her research areas include fundamental theology and theological anthropology. She is the English subeditor of a forthcoming multilingual Ratzinger Lexikon.

Katherine Sonderegger is Professor of Theology at Virginia Theological Seminary (US). She is well known for her work in the study of Christian doctrine generally and the theology of Karl Barth in particular. In addition to many essays and articles, her recent publications include Systematic Theology I – The Doctrine of God (2015) and Systematic Theology II – The Doctrine of the Holy Trinity: Processions and Persons (2020).
Elina Vuola is Professor of Global Christianity and Dialogue of Religions at the Faculty of Theology, University of Helsinki (Finland). Her scholarship concerns Latin American liberation and feminist theologies as well as the relationship between secular gender studies and feminist study of religion. A long-standing interest has been the figure of the Virgin Mary and its relationship to feminist and liberation theologies. She served as an Academy Professor of the Academy of Finland in 2013–17, researching Finnish religious minorities from a lived religion and gender perspective. She has been a visiting researcher at the Departamento Ecuménico de Investigaciones in San José (Costa Rica); at the Women’s Studies in Religion programme at the Harvard Divinity School (US); and at the Department of Religious Studies at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois (US). Her most recent publication is The Virgin Mary across Cultures: Devotion among Costa Rican Catholic and Finnish Orthodox Women (2019).

Judith Wolfe is Professor of Philosophical Theology at the University of St Andrews (UK). She has written widely on eschatology and other subjects in systematic and philosophical theology, as well as on theology and the arts. Her books include Heidegger’s Eschatology (2013), Heidegger and Theology (2014) and the Oxford Handbook of Nineteenth-Century Christian Thought (with Joel Rasmussen and Johannes Zachhuber, 2017); she is currently editing the three-volume Oxford History of Modern German Theology (with David Lincicum and Johannes Zachhuber) and the Cambridge Companion to Eschatology.