Contents

Figures vii
Acknowledgements ix

Introduction 1
Taiwan Peculiarities 3
Transnational Cinema as a Method 7
A Roadmap: Historicising Taiwan New Cinema and Focus on Filmmakers 9

Part I Historicising Taiwan New Cinema 17
1 The Rise of Taiwan New Cinema and the Festival Strategy
   Taiwan’s Commercial Cinema (1955–80) 19
   Taiwan’s Film Industry in Crisis 23
   The Rise of Taiwan New Cinema 26
   The Festival Strategy 29
   Edited, Sealed, Delivered: A City of Sadness 32
2 Women Critics and Building the Auteur 38
   The Scandalous Truth behind the Sour Apple 40
   From Exclusion to Acceptance 45
   A Global Slow Take on Film 51
   Conclusion 57

Part II Filmmakers in Focus 61
   Transnational Voyages 64
   Cinematic (Re)Mapping of City Life in Café Lumière 66
   Towards a Postcolonial History 73
   The Filmmaker as Flâneur in Le Voyage du ballon rouge 78
   Conclusion 86
Table of Contents

4 Going West: Tsai Ming-liang at the Louvre and Cinema in the Gallery 87
- Journey to the Museum 91
- From the Local Theatre to the Global Stage 94
- Tsai Ming-liang’s Movie Theatre 98
- At Home at the Museum 102
- Conclusion 105

5 A Southbound Turn: Dreaming Taiwan in Midi Z’s Realist Films 106
- From Fudaojin to the World Cinema Fund 108
- Beneath the Film Subsidies and the Southbound Policy 110
- Poverty, the Gaze and the Mode of Production 113
- Into the Soundscape and the Film Industry’s Exploitation of Women 119
- Conclusion 126

6 To the Future: Film Festivals as Producers and Sleeping in the Cinema 128
- Festival Co-production and Financing 131
- Festival Film 134
- The Sleepy Spectator 138

- Postscript: An American Girl in Taiwan 149
- Bibliography 153

Index 163