List of Figures

Figure 1.1 The so-called “Agas” map of London of ca. 1561 — 40
Figure 1.2a Number 1 Poultry in the tenth century — 47
Figure 1.2b Number 1 Poultry ca. 1000–1050 (after Burch and Treveil, The Development of Early Medieval and Later Poultry and Cheapside, fig. 13) — 48
Figure 1.3 The eleventh-century St. Paul’s tombstone decorated in the Ringerike style (© Museum of London) — 55
Figure 1.4 The eleventh-century Cheapside jeweler’s hoard (© Museum of London) — 61
Figure 3.1 Photograph of the finds from Old London Bridge, originally published as the frontispiece to the London Museum catalogue London and the Vikings (1927). The item illustrated top right (described as a pair of tongs) may not belong with the other finds. Photograph © Museum of London — 76
Figure 3.2 Axe-head A23346 with decorated brass collar. Photograph © Museum of London — 90
Figure 3.3 Drawing of axe-head, with detail of decorated brass collar, from London Museum catalogue London and the Vikings, 1927 — 90
Figure 3.4 Spearhead A23353 with decorated socket. Photograph © Museum of London — 91
Figure 3.5 Drawing of spearhead A23353 with detail of decoration, from London Museum catalogue London and the Vikings, 1927 — 91
Figure 8.1 Single sheet charter of Cnut granting an estate at Drayton (Hants) to New Minster, Winchester (S 956, dated Easter 1019). By permission of the Warden and Scholars of Winchester College — 182
Figure 10.1 The Winchester Cathedral mortuary chest bearing the names of King Cnut and Queen Emma. Photograph © John Crook — 210
Figure 10.2 Cnut the Great and Queen Emma present a cross to the New Minster, Winchester. Vitae of the New Minster 1031, prefatory image, BL Stowe 944, fol 6r. Photograph: British Library — 211
Figure 10.3 The second half of the inscriptions of the later-twelfth-century Purbeck marble tomb-slabs for (upper) Earl Beorn and Richard, son of William I, and (lower) Edmund Ironside, son of Æthelred II. Photograph © John Crook — 225
Figure 10.4 Anglo-Saxon stone sculpture from Old Minster, Winchester, showing what may be the episode of Sigmund and the wolf known from Völsunga saga. Photograph © John Crook — 226
Figure 10.5 The site of Queen Emma’s manor of Goodbegot in High Street, Winchester today. Photograph © Barbara Yorke — 228
Figure 10.6 Fragmentary runic inscription from church of St. Maurice, Winchester. Photograph © Corpus of Anglo-Saxon Stone Sculpture: photographer Simon I. Hill — 229
Figure 11.1 The Sigmundr stone: Photograph © Martin Biddle, “Excavations at Winchester 1965: Fourth Interim Report.” (Plate LXII) — 236

https://doi.org/10.1515/9781501513336-204
Figure 11.2 Drawing showing all lines carved on the extant fragment —— 237

Figure 11.3 Suggested completion of the scenes implied by the narrative frieze, showing the degree of extension necessitated by the extant image —— 239

Figure 14.1 Overview of the excavated house structures at the Sct. Peder Stæde settlement 1966–1967. Notice house V, the most well-built house with wooden wall planks and curved outer walls. After Levin Nielsen, “Pederstræde i Viborg,” 25, Figure 2 —— 310

Figure 14.2a The workshop seen from the south. In the background, the anvil pit and the forge —— 312

Figure 14.2b Overview of the area excavated in 2001 —— 313

Figure 14.3a Reconstructions of the earliest smithy from 1018 —— 314

Figure 14.3b The altered building from ca. 1020 from the Søndersø area. Drawing Sara Heil Jensen (2001) —— 315

Figure 14.4 (a) Gold brooch found near Hornelund. (b) Its lead patrice found at Viborg Søndersø. Photo: Lennart Larsen and Arne Vindum —— 315

Figure 14.5 Sherds from a watering pot made in Stamford, England from the early eleventh century. The pot of whitish clay with a green glaze had holes in the bottom. It could have been used to water rush covered earthen floors – thus keeping down the dust. Photograph: Lars Guldager —— 317

Figure 14.6a-c A cross-guard from a sword hilt, a chape from a scabbard together with a piece of ring mail. Drawing Mohan Subramaniam Arulanadham —— 318

Figure 14.7a-b Spurs and bridle fittings from Viborg Søndersø. Drawing Mohan Subramaniam Arulanadham —— 319

Figure 14.8 Bones of a goshawk and a kestrel, recovered from the excavations in 2001. Photograph: Geert Brovad —— 320

Figure 14.9 The point of the lance pole found at Viborg Søndersø. Photograph: Viborg Museum —— 321

Figure 14.10 Two small lead pieces. The piece to the right shows great similarities with some of the coins minted in the reign of Cnut the Great. Photograph: Lars Guldager —— 322

Figure 14.11 An eleventh-century shoe from Viborg Søndersø displaying possible English style influences, possibly of English origin or alternatively made by an English shoemaker in Viborg. Photograph: Lars Guldager —— 322

Figure 14.12 Coins of Cnut the Great, minted in Viborg. Photograph: Lennart Larsen —— 324

Figure 14.13 The Mammen axe with silver inlays is found in a grave dated to 970/971. Photograph: Lennart Larsen —— 325

Figure 14.14 The Asmild rune stone. Photograph: Lars Guldager —— 326

Figure 14.15 A row at least 15 m long of oblong postholes from trench S. It is probably much longer from trench S. Could it be a part of an extremely visible and impressive demarcation of the Thingstead area at the foot of the Thingstead itself – Borgvold? Drawing Hans Krongaard Kristensen —— 330
Figure 14.16  Ornaments like this in the fashion of a coin struck in Viborg under Cnut the Great was presented to the English troops who rolled into Viborg on May 12, 1945. Photograph: Jesper Hjermind —— 335

Figure 20.1  Martyrdom of St. Clement by Bernardino Fungai (ca. 1500). © York Museums Trust (York Art Gallery) —— 433

Figure 20.2  View of St. Clement’s from Roskilde Harbour, and North Doorway —— 446

Figure 20.3  Altar panel from Skjærvøy, Troms, Norway (after 1500), showing St. Clement with his papal tiara, holding papal cross and anchor (Oslo Universitets Oldsaksamling) —— 455