ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I warmly thank Anthony Calnek, Director of Publications of the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York, for his initiative to pull me into the Chagall world, as well as for the early publication of parts of this material in the catalogue Marc Chagall and the Jewish Theater (1992) and for the right to reproduce it here. I owe special thanks and personal gratitude to Meret Meyer-Graber who opened the family archives for me, notably the Russian texts of Chagall's early years. The Archives of the YIVO Jewish Research Institute in New York, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Israeli Knesset, the Israel Museum, and the National and University Library in Jerusalem helped me locate Chagall's manuscripts and gave me permission to publish them in English translation. Special thanks to my friend the Yiddish poet A. Sutzkever in Tel Aviv for permission to use Chagall's texts published in his journal Di Goldene Keyt. And thanks to the art historian Pierre Schneider in Paris for permission to reprint his interview with Chagall in the Louvre.

I am grateful to all who helped in this endeavor, especially Rivka Markus at the Knesset in Jerusalem, Nina Hayun-Mokady in Ra'anana, Marek Webb and Nikolay Borodulin at the YIVO in New York, Rafael Weiser at the National and University Library in Jerusalem, and the art historian Alexandra Shatskikh in Moscow. Daniel Feldman of the Department of Comparative Literature at Yale University prepared the index. All were knowledgeable and kind, and I thank them sincerely.

BENJAMIN HARSHAV
Yale University