Contents

Acknowledgements vii
Introduction viii
  Yoko Aoshima (Kobe University, Japan)

Uniate Martyr Josaphat and His Role as a Confessionalizing, Integrating, and Nationalizing Influence 1
  Chiho Fukushima (Tokyo University of Foreign Studies, Japan)

Conversion and Culture in Russia’s Western Borderlands, 1800–55 29
  Barbara Skinner (Indiana State University, US)

Religion in the Rhetoric of the 1863–64 Uprising 50
  Zita Medisauskienė (Lithuanian Institute of History, Lithuania)

Orthodox Christianity Emerging as an Ethical Principle in School Education in the 1860–70s 68
  Yoko Aoshima (Kobe University, Japan)

The Roman Catholic Clergy and the Notion of Lithuanian National Identity 84
  Vilma Žaltauskaitė (Lithuanian Institute of History, Lithuania)

The Nobility in the Lithuanian National Project in the Late Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Century: The Approach of the Catholic Clergy 97
  Olga Mastianica-Stankevič (Lithuanian Institute of History, Lithuania)
Praising Christ, Serving the Nation: The Ideology of the Catholic Newspaper Bielarus (1913–15)
Aliaksandr Bystryk (Central European University, Hungary) 118

Defining the Public Sphere through Cultural Boundaries: Creating a “Czech” National Society in Nineteenth-Century Bohemia
Taku Shinohara (Tokyo University of Foreign Studies, Japan) 130

“Building” Nationalism: St. Elisabeth Church in Lemberg
Dominika Rank (Ukrainian Catholic University, Ukraine) 150

Local Governance and Religion in the Kingdom of Poland, 1905–14: Multireligious Relief Actions for Unemployed Workers in Łódź
Kenshi Fukumoto (Research Fellow of Japan Society for the Promotion of Science, Japan) 161

Max Weber and Eastern Europe: The Religious Background to Modern Nationalism
Hajime Konno (Aichi Prefectural University, Japan) 181

Index 194