Acknowledgments

This book is the result of the combined efforts of a number of individuals and organizations. We especially would like to thank the members of the 1999 study group “Cuba: Preparing for the Future,” who contributed their expertise and insights regarding Cuba’s present political and economic situation and the country’s prospects for becoming a democracy and a market economy.

We would particularly like to thank Marianne Benet, assistant to the vice president of the Americas Society, for her invaluable assistance in organizing the study group and preparing the resulting manuscript for publication. We would also especially like to thank Ben Ramsey, associate program officer at the Americas Society, for coordinating and running the study group. Thanks also go to Eliav Decter, former assistant to the vice president, and Alex Gross, former associate program officer, for their help in the initial phases of the project. In addition, we wish to thank Michelle Miller-Adams for her excellent editorial work. Finally, we would like to acknowledge the staff at Lynne Rienner Publishers for their valuable contributions to the editorial and publication processes.

This book and the study group from which it developed were made possible by a generous grant to the Western Hemisphere Department of the Americas Society by the Tinker Foundation, Inc. We especially wish to thank the foundation’s chair, Martha T. Muse, and its president, Renate Rennie, for their continuing support.
