Stephen Fuchs, the founder of the Institute of Indian Culture, a research center in anthropology and sociology in the megacity of Mumbai, has been a source of inspiration to a large number of scholars who have undertaken research on the marginalized people of India. After a long period of committed scholarly work, spanning more than sixty years in India, he has gone back, reluctantly, to Vienna for medical care and rest. This volume is dedicated to him in appreciation of his enormous contribution to Indian anthropology and sociology.

This book is a product of teamwork. First of all, I express my profound sense of gratitude to J. V. Ferreira for his valuable suggestions throughout the book. I am indebted to Teresa Menezes for typing the manuscript. I am also grateful to Elizabeth Reuben, Kaj Tougaard, and Mark R. Hooper for their editorial assistance.

Last, but not least, I express my sincere thanks to the contributors to this volume.
