Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Acknowledgments xi
Preface xii

Introduction. The Long Shore: Perspectives on Maritime Cultural Landscapes 1
Marco Meniketti

Part I. Before the Invasion: The Indigenous Maritime World—Ancient Landscapes 21

Chapter 1. Marine Cultural Heritage, Landscapes, and the Human Dimension of Marine Ecosystems: Building Bridges between Marine and Social Science, an Example of the Chumash Paleocoastal 23
Amy E. Gusick, Jillian Maloney, Todd J. Braje, Shannon Klotsko, Jon M. Erlandson, and Luke Johnson

Chapter 2. Life at Tstyiwí (CA-SLO-51/H), A Northern Chumash Maritime Community on the Pecho Coast of Central California 47
Terry L. Jones and Brian E. Coddington

Chapter 3. The Drakes Bay Historic and Archaeological District: Encounters at Tamal-Húye 72
Matthew A. Russell

Part II. Immigrant Communities and Economies 99

Chapter 4. California’s Nineteenth-Century Chinese Fisheries and the Dawn of Commercial Abalone Fishing 101
Todd J. Braje and Linda Bentz
Chapter 5. Feluccas on the San Francisco Bay: Italian Fishermen and the Meaning of Community and the Mediterranean Connection

   Marco Meniketti

Chapter 6. A Case Study of the Portuguese and Shore Whaling: Linking the Azores to California

   Catherine Mistely, Karen Johansson, and Marco Meniketti

Part III. Opportunistic Industry and Enterprises

Chapter 7. Repurposing and Reusing Ships

   Sheli Smith

Chapter 8. The Redwood Coast’s Doghole Ports: The Interplay between Resource Extraction, Shipping, and Community

   Deborah Marx and Denise Jaffke

Epilogue

   Amy E. Gusick

Index