I owe an enormous amount of gratitude for the warmth, friendship and unfailing patience of the Karenni refugees I have come to know. I have to thank in particular Beh Meh and Mary, my most valued companions; Paw Wah, my first Karenni friend; Saw Eh Gay and his family, who treated me as one of their own; all my teacher colleagues, especially Mariano, who made me laugh until I cried; all the students of 1996–7’s 9th and 10th standards and Post-Ten; those who were so hospitable in other camps and villages; Saw Ka Htoo at the Foreign Office, whose friendship is as durable as his patience; and Saya-gyi Teddy Buri, whose friendly criticisms have been indispensable. I am extremely grateful too to the KNPP executive and camp committees for not only permitting but also facilitating my research; in particular, Abel Tweed, Rimond Htoo, Khu U Reh, Hte Buphe and Aung Than Lay. All but the last six names have been changed – but they will know who they are.

Others in Thailand to whom I am grateful include Claire Whieldon, Edith Bowles, Kerry Demusz, Susan Menzies, Christina Fink, Chrissie Gittins, Gabrielle Schaumberger, all at the International Rescue Committee (IRC), Sally Thompson, Lyndal Barry, Pippa Curwen, Women’s Education for Advancement and Empowerment (WEAVE), Dr Supang Chantavanich, and all at the Karenni Student Development Programme (KSDP).

For the grants and research time that have made this book possible, I am indebted to the Arts and Humanities Research Council, the British Academy, the University of Leicester’s special study leave scheme, Jesus College Oxford, the Emslie Horniman and RAI/Sutasoma funds of the Royal Anthropological Institute, the Peter Lienhardt Memorial Fund, Cha Fund and the Board of Graduate Studies at the University of Oxford, and the Evans Fund at the University of Cambridge.

I am also appreciative of discussion with Nick Allen, the late Michael Aris, Marcus Banks, Donna Guest, Clare Harris, Tania Kaiser, Howard Morphy, Alison Petch, Patricia Sloane-White, Martin Smith, Andrew Turton and colleagues and students in the Department of Museum Studies at the University of Leicester. Thanks too go to the anonymous readers of the manuscript for this book, and to Jim Roberts for help with the maps. And I am forever grateful for the enduring love and support of my family, especially Simon Gill.
