Acknowledgements

The authors are indebted to Frederik Kok and the team at the IDMC in Geneva for their advice and guidance on all aspects of this study, and in particular for their topical input into Chapter Seven and critical commentary at various stages of the book’s preparation. We are also grateful to Dr Ruwani Jayewardene whose expert advice on the national and international legal and policy frameworks governing development and displacement, and the weaknesses in those frameworks, contributed importantly to the preparation of Chapter Five in this report and shaped also the concluding comments. Chapter Five contains ideas presented in an unpublished proposal for further research on these issues prepared by McDowell and Jayewardene in 2007 and 2008. We are grateful to Professor John Pilgrim for allowing us to use material drawn from a research proposal prepared by McDowell and Pilgrim on multiple displacement in Cambodia in 2007. Brief sections from Christopher McDowell’s article published in the Australasian Journal of Trauma and Disaster Studies (2002, Volume 2) are included in the Conclusion. The views expressed in this volume are those of the authors who take responsibility for any errors or omissions.