References

References follow the Chicago author-date 16B system,¹ and have been divided between primary sources, consisting of the documents from the United Nations that have been examined above, online sources, and literature cited. Primary sources have been subdivided between International treaties, documentation from Charter-based bodies like the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Human Rights Council, documents from treaty-based bodies like the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, and documentation from other UN sources, including documents from the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and specialized programs like the World Health Organization.²

Presently, all the committees publish separate documents with concluding observations, but throughout most of the 1990s, several of the committees only issued observations as parts of their annual/sessional reports, leading some references to be dated the year after the review took place. Annual/sessional reports are listed in the index, but not separately per country. Summary records are published haphazardly by the UN, and can appear several months, even years after meetings between state parties and committees. In order to make the list of summary records navigable, they are listed in order of their document number instead of their date of publication. While full records are given in the index, I have limited their inclusion in the main document to a simplified author-date format to avoid excessive listings. Digits from UN documents indicate paragraph number rather than page number.

² I have followed the general recommendation of the Chicago Manual of Style Online website in the citation of UN documents, subdividing documents by authorizing body, and listing the topic or title of the paper, date of publication and the series and publication numbers, although the latter is optional. See http://www.chicagomanualofstyle.org/16/ch14/ch14_sec317.html (accessed 23.08.2016). On the advice of the UN Dag Hammarskjöld library, I have not included URLs for UN documents, because links generated under the Official Document System (ODS) of the UN do not work: http://ask.un.org/faq/l4438.
