Contents

Carlos Acuña-Fariña, Ignacio Palacios-Martínez and Elena Seoane
Subordination, or the permanent allure of the “adjacent possible” —— 1

Part I: Diachronic perspectives on subordination

Hendrik De Smet
From flying Sancho to swooning Altisidora: The changing use of premodifying present participles in three English translations of Cervantes’ Don Quijote —— 25

Alexander Bergs
Because science! Notes on a variable conjunction —— 43

David Denison
That-clauses as complements of verbs or nouns —— 61

Juhani Rudanko
Semantic roles as a factor affecting complement choice: a case study with data from COHA —— 85

Günter Rohdenburg
Expanding the type you can’t help laughing —— 103

Bas Aarts, Sean Wallis and Jill Bowie
-ing clauses in spoken English: structure, usage and recent change —— 129

Hubert Cuyckens and Frauke D’hoedt
Resourceful ways of recruiting members: The origin and development of Mental zero-Secondary Predicate Constructions —— 155

Christian Mair
The rise of long catenative constructions in Modern English: new sub-schemas and new stylistic options —— 185

Part II: Subordination in Present-day Englishes

Elisabeth Bruckmaier
Catenative GET in World Englishes —— 211
Sven Leuckert
Adverbial subordination across variety types: A synchronic analysis of the syntax and semantics of since- and while-clauses in ENL, ESL, and EFL — 235

Rahel Oppliger
Whatever the specific circumstances, ...: A Construction Grammar perspective of wh-ever clauses in English — 263

Cristina Suárez-Gómez
A sociolinguistic study of relativizers in spoken Philippines English — 285

Subject index — 309