List of Contributors

Romed Aschwanden is managing director of the Institute “Cultures of the Alps” at the University of Lucerne. His research focuses on transnational social and environmental history of modern Europe and the history of infrastructure. romed.aschwanden@kulturen-der-alpen.ch

Maria Buck is a doctoral candidate at the Department of History and European Ethnology at the University of Innsbruck and works in the FWF-DACH project “Issues with Europe”. Her research interests lie in the field of alpine and environmental history and cultural studies. maria.buck@uibk.ac.at

Peter A. Coates is Professor of American and Environmental History at the University of Bristol, UK. His books include Salmon (London: Reaktion, 2006), American Perceptions of Immigrant and Invasive Species (Berkeley: University of California Press, 2007), A Story of Six Rivers: History, Culture and Ecology (Reaktion, 2013) and the co-edited (with David Moon and Paul Warde) Local Places, Global Processes: Histories of Environmental Change in Britain and Beyond (Oxford: Windgather Press, 2016). He also contributed a report on cultural ecosystem services to the UK’s National Ecosystem Assessment Follow-On exercise (2014). p.a.coates@bristol.ac.uk

Astrid M. Eckert is Professor of History at Emory University. She teaches modern German and European history. Her research engages European history after 1945 as well as German environmental history. She is the author of West Germany and the Iron Curtain. Environment, Economy, and Culture in the Borderlands (Oxford University Press, 2019). aeckert@emory.edu

Liesbeth van de Grift is Professor of International History and the Environment at Utrecht University. She specializes in the history of political representation through the lens of rural, environmental, and consumer governance in the twentieth century. She is leading the research project Consumers on the March: Civic Activism and Political Representation in Europe, 1960s to 1990s (2018–2023). Together with Amalia Ribi Forclaz, she edited the volume Governing the Rural in Interwar Europe (Abingdon: Routledge, 2017). l.vandegrift@uu.nl

Robert Groß accomplished a PhD in Environmental History at the Alpen-Adria University Klagenfurt/Austria in 2017. His book Die Beschleunigung der Berge. Eine Umweltgeschichte des Wintertourismus in Vorarlberg/Österreich, 1920–2010 was published by Böhlau (Vienna) in 2019. Currently he is working on the second book project on the environmental history of the Marshall Plan. robert.gross@uibk.ac.at https://doi.org/10.1515/9783110669213-019

Ute Hasenöhrl is a social and environmental historian at the University of Innsbruck, Austria. An Assistant Professor at the Department of History and European Ethnology, she has published on the history of social movements and civil society, cultural landscapes and energy issues, as well as on the development and perception of socio-technical systems, institutions, and public goods. She is author of Zivilgesellschaft und Protest. Eine Geschichte der Naturschutz- und Umweltbewegung in Bayern 1945–1980 (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2011) and co-editor of the volume Urban Lighting, Light Pollution and Society (New York/London: Routledge, 2015). ute.hasenoehrl@uibk.ac.at

Richard Hölzle is Lecturer at the Seminar for Medieval and Modern History, University of Göttingen. His research fields include the environmental history of modern Europe and the history of German and European colonialism. Publications include Umkämpfte Wälder. Die Geschichte einer ökologischen Reform in Deutschland, 1760–1860 (Frankfurt am Main: Campus 2010) and Gläubige Imperialisten. Katholische Mission in Deutschland und Ostafrika, 1830–1960 (Frankfurt am Main: Campus 2021), and the collected work Managing Northern Europe’s Forests. Histories from the Age of Improvement to Age of Ecology, edited with K. Jan Oosthoek (New York/Oxford: Berghahn, 2018). rhoelzl@gwdg.de Arne Kaijser is professor emeritus of History of Technology at KTH Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm. He was president of the Society for the History of Technology (2009–2010). His main research interests concern the historical development of infrastructural systems from a transnational perspective. His latest book (with Per Högselius and Erik van der Vleuten) is Europe’s Infrastructure Transition. Economy, War, Nature (Palgrave, 2016). arne.kaijser@abe.kth.se.

Astrid Mignon Kirchhof is a research associate in the project Transdisciplinary Research on the Disposal on High-Level Radioactive Waste in Germany at the Karlsruhe Institute of Technology. Her research includes German-German history, conservation and environmental history, the history of technology, the history of conflict and social movements, urban history, and the history of philanthropy and gender. Publication: with John R. McNeill (ed.), Nature and the Iron Curtain. Environmental Policy and Social Movements in Communist and Capitalist Countries 1945–1990, Pittsburgh 2019. astrid.m.kirchhof@hu-berlin.de.

Patrick Kupper is Full Professor of Economic and Social History at the University of Innsbruck, Austria. His expertise is in transnational economic, social and environmental history of modern Europe. He is the author of Creating Wilderness: A Transnational History of the Swiss National Park (New York: Berghahn, 2014) and of an introduction to environmental history of modern Europe, Umweltgeschichte (Göttingen: UTB, Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2021). patrick.kupper@uibk.ac.at Simo Laakkonen is a senior lecturer of landscape studies at the University of Turku, Finland. He specialises in urban environmental history, environmental history of the Baltic Sea and environmental history of the Second World War and the Cold War. simo.laakkonen@utu.fi

Wim van Meurs is full professor of European Political History at Radboud University Nijmegen in the Netherlands, Radboud Institute for Culture & History. His expertise is in East European studies, European integration history, environmental history and the Second World War. His current research focuses on nature conservation and environmental policies in the Netherlands and he is project leader for Local governance between occupying power and citizens (2021–2024). w.v.meurs@let.ru.nl

Jan-Henrik Meyer is a senior researcher at the Max Planck Institute for Legal History and Legal Theory, Frankfurt am Main, writing a history of European environmental law, and at the Institute for Futures Studies and Technology Assessment, Berlin, examining the history of public engagement with nuclear energy in West Germany. Areas of expertise: transnational history of European integration, social movements, environmental and energy history. Publications: Engaging the Atom. The History of Nuclear Energy and Society in Europe from the 1950s to the Present (2021, co-editor); “Kleine Geschichte der Atomkraftkontroverse in Deutschland.” Aus Politik und Zeitgeschichte 71, no. 21/23 (2021): 10–16. meyer@lhlt.mpg.de

K. Jan Oosthoek is an environmental historian based in Brisbane. For many years he has lectured and researched at the Universities of Newcastle (UK) and Edinburgh. He has published on a wide range of topics including forest history, the history of industrial water pollution and history of the ozone problem. He is the author of Conquering the Highlands. A History of the afforestation of the Scottish Uplands (Canberra: ANU Press, 2013) and together with Richard Hözl he edited Managing Northern Europe’s Forests. Histories from the Age of Improvement to Age of Ecology (New York/Oxford: Berghahn, 2018). kjwoosthoek@eh-resources.org

Tuomas Räsänen is an associate professor of environmental history at the University of Eastern Finland, Finland. He specialises in marine environmental history, history of environmentalism and history of human relation to wild animals. tuomas.rasanen@uef.fi

Kira J. Schmidt is a doctoral candidate at the LMU’s Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society in Munich, Germany. She is part of the DFG-DACH research project “Issues with Europe”. Her thesis on Alpine transit traffic includes European integration history, transnational history, environmental history, history of technology, and digital history. kira.schmidt@rcc.lmu.de

Elke Seefried is Full Professor of Modern History (19th to 21st Century) at RWTH Aachen University, Germany. Her expertise is in transnational knowledge and environmental history as well as political history of modern Germany and Europe. She is the author of Zukünfte. Aufstieg und Krise der Zukunftsforschung 1945–1980 (Berlin: de Gruyter, 2015) and editor of Politische Zukünfte im 20. Jahrhundert. Parteien – Bewegungen – Umbrüche (Frankfurt am Main: Campus, forthcoming). seefried@histinst.rwth-aachen.de.

Pavla Šimková is postdoctoral researcher at the Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society at LMU Munich. Her research interests include Central European and American environmental history and urban history. Her current project focuses on transboundary environmental history of the Bavarian Forest and Šumava. pavla.simkova@rcc.lmu.de

Silke Vetter-Schultheiß is a historian with a research focus on environmental history, visual history, and philosophy of history. She has been fellow of the graduate school “Topology of Technology” at the Technical University Darmstadt. She is coeditor of *Technik – Macht – Heike Weber is Professor of History of Technology at Technische Universität Berlin. She currently studies the history of waste, recycling and repair, thereby pushing history of technology beyond its traditional focus on production, consumption and use – towards issues of obsolescence, decay and disposal. Recent publications include Krebs, Stefan/Weber, Heike (eds.): Histories of Technology’s Persistence: Repair, Reuse and Disposal (Bielefeld: transcript, 2021) and the co-edited Special Issue (with Chad Denton) on Rethinking Waste within Business History: A Transnational Perspective on Waste Recycling in World War II (Business History, 2021).

Anna-Katharina Wöbse is an environmental historian, curator, and researcher at the University of Gießen. She has extensively published on media and the environment, human-animal relations, and the history of transnational environmental movements and diplomacy (Weltnaturschutz: Umweltdiplomatie in Vereinten Nationen und Völkerbund 1920–1950, Frankfurt am Main/New York: Campus, 2012). Her current research project focusses on the history of wetlands and amphibians.

Hans-Peter Ziemek is Professor of Biological Didactics at the University of Gießen. He has conducted extensive research on science and nature education, public relations in conservation, and the history of science. Together with Hans-Werner Frohn and Hansjörg Küster he edited the volume Ausweisungen von Nationalparks in Deutschland. Akzeptanz und Widerstand (Bonn-Bad Godesberg: BfN, 2016).