Contents

Introduction
Home in the East — 1

Chapter 1
Home in the East as a Bureaucratic Nightmare: On Property Claims, Media Representations, and the Informative Function of Television Movies — 20
  A Deeply Flawed System — 21
  Informative Fiction in Television: Taxi to Rathenow — 38

Chapter 2
Home in the East as a Site of Competing Histories: Our House (Griesmayr, 1991) and The Same Old Song (Stöckl, 1992) — 50
  Patrilineal Heimat, Patrilineal History in Our House — 51
  Matrilineal Heimat and History in The Same Old Song — 63
  Heimat as Material Engagement, Not Family History — 70

Chapter 3
Home in the East as a Capitalist Battlefield: The Brocken (Glowna, 1992) and No More Mr. Nice Guy (Buck, 1993) — 73
  Commodifying Community in The Brocken — 75
  The Cruelty of Capitalism in No More Mr. Nice Guy — 86
  Spaces of Resistance? — 95

Chapter 4
  Home as an Overdetermined Place in "Summerhouse, Later" — 101
  Deterritorialized Home as a Nightmare in Where Love Begins — 111
  Is There a Reterritorialization? — 121

Chapter 5
  Property, History, and Emasculation in Eduard’s Homecoming — 126
Chapter 6
Home in the East as a Thing of the Past: Jenny Erpenbeck’s Visitation (2008) and Kathrin Gerlof’s Now That’s a Story (2014) — 153
The Erratic Linearity of Time in Jenny Erpenbeck’s Visitation — 155
Time as Accountability in Kathrin Gerlof’s Now That’s a Story — 167
The Threatening Inevitability of (In)justice — 178

Chapter 7
Home in the East as Corporate Overlord: Juli Zeh’s Unterleuten (2016) — 181
The Alien Invasion of Capitalism, or Not Recognizing the Sociomateriality — 185
Violent Capitalism(s) — 190
The Fallacy of Misrecognition — 197

Coda
Home in the East as an Ongoing Issue: Sonja Blattner’s drüben Series and the Importance of Considering Medium — 200

Works Cited — 208
Primary Texts — 208
Secondary Literature and Theoretical Works — 209
Laws, Legal Decisions, and Treaties — 217

Index — 220