Acknowledgement

At the outset, I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude to De Gruyter, Berlin, Germany for bringing out my original research project report in the form of a monograph to enable a wider dissemination of the knowledge generated, across the world. Start-ups have been emerging rapidly all across the globe and so are their entrepreneurial ecosystems. However, hardly a few researchers have attempted to explore its evolution, structure and role in the promotion of start-ups. India, being a rapidly emerging economy comprising multiple start-up hubs and ecosystems, is an appropriate context for an in-depth study and the present monograph aptly fills up the gap.

However, the monograph would not have seen the light of the day without the continuous persuasion and constant support of Mr John Stuart from John Stuart Editorial. He has continuously kept in touch with me and prodded me (for more than a year) to: (i) submit a detailed book proposal to De Gruyter and get their approval for publication, and (ii) see that necessary permissions are obtained from the original sponsor of the research project and the final manuscript was submitted to De Gruyter in time. I am immensely grateful to him.

It has been a very pleasant experience for me to interact with Mr Steven Hardman, Acquisitions Editor, De Gruyter, and Ms Lucy Jarman, Content Editor – Books, Social Sciences, De Gruyter, right from the beginning (when I submitted my book proposal and draft manuscript) till the end (of publishing this monograph). Their constant support and encouragement have played an important role in the timely publication of this monograph. I am thankful to both of them.

The original research project was sponsored by National Science and Technology Management Information System (NSTMIS), Department of Science and Technology (DST), Government of India, New Delhi. But for their support, I would not have carried out the research project in its original form. Particularly, Dr Parveen Arora, Advisor, NSTMIS, DST and Dr A N Rai, Director, NSTMIS, DST were extremely supportive and a constant source of encouragement throughout the implementation of the research project. Dr Parveen Arora was instrumental in obtaining and communicating the necessary permission for the publication of the research project as a monograph. I am grateful to both of them.

I am greatly indebted to my Institute, namely, Indian Institute of Science (IISc), Bangalore for enabling me to carry out the original research project and publish it as a monograph. The IISc environment has always been a source of inspiration for my research activities in the field of Industrial Economics, with a focus on start-ups and their ecosystems, for more than a decade now.

Mr Muralidharan Loganathan, Senior Research Fellow, Department of Management Studies, IISc, was extremely helpful by providing me all the necessary figures in an editable form for the monograph. My heartfelt thanks to him.

Finally, I would like to express my gratitude to all the stakeholders of entrepreneurial ecosystems of Bangalore and Hyderabad who have greatly contributed to the original research project and therefore, to the current monograph. But for their cooperation and contribution, this monograph would not have emerged in the current form.

M H Bala Subrahmanya
Professor
Department of Management Studies
Indian Institute of Science
BANGALORE-560012
INDIA