Acknowledgments

I am so thankful as I complete this book. I am now at that moment. This is part of my journey in academic activities. In this lovely moment, it is so important to look back and collect all the memories that were involved in the whole process of writing this book. With tears, love, kindness, and many people who are showing their kind hearts, I now can reach this achievement.

I want to express most profound appreciation to my supervisors when I conducted my doctorate research at the Graduate School of Humanities, Tilburg University, Netherlands. First, Professor Herman L. Beck, for all support, patience, motivation, and continued support for me in continuing and completing this project. Professor Herman L. Beck—with open arms and warm heart, encouraged me not to give up in showing and proving my capacity in finishing this project. He also personally helped me to find opportunities to finance my study. Second, I also want to give thanks to Professor Mirjam van Reisen. For this research, she challenged me in exploring and elaborating on a proper conceptual framework to guide my research. As one of the recognized experts in international human rights and an extraordinary ‘voice’ for refugees, she provided a significant contribution to my research from her experience as a scholar as well as human rights activist. Besides my supervisors, I also would like to give thanks to the committee members for my dissertation; Professor Kees van Dijk (Leiden University), Professor Karel Steenbrink (Utrecht University), Professor Tom Zwart (Utrecht University), and Dr. Jan Jans (Tilburg University).

I could not have completed the research for this book without the support from some funding foundation. I want to give my thanks the Institute of Missiology (the MWI-Missio), Aachen, Germany, for providing the financial support to this research (2012–2016). This project was funded by the Institute of Missiology (the MWI-Missio) with the project number: The Institute of Missiology|318.023–12/001. I need to mention three leading figures from the Institute of Missiology (the MWI—Missio); Professor Harald Suermann (Director), Dr. Annette Meutrath (Asia Department), and Dr. Marco Moerschbacher (Africa Department). To all family members of the MWI Aachen, I would like to give thanks for a great dedication to my study. I also give thanks to Kak Johnny G.E. Plate and Kak Ana Maria Soe (Jakarta, Indonesia), who are continuously showing generosity and sharing support through their foundation Theresia Pora-Plate (Jakarta)—even before my doctorate project. Through the help of Professor Herman Beck, I also received support from the Frans Seda Foundation (Haarlem, the Netherlands). Es-especially for this, I give thanks for the help of Mr. A.H.H.M. Huijgers and Mr.
J.J.L.M. van Gent. I also want to thank Om Yongky Setjadiningrat and Tanta Gail M. Hardy for all their support during my study and stay in the Netherlands.
I also would like to thank the Acton Institute (New York, USA) that also provided some small travel grants for attending some international conferences: Nottingham University, UK (2013), University of London, UK (2015), and Padova University, Italy (2016).

I also want to give thanks to the Graduate School of Humanities, Tilburg University, Netherlands, for showing kindness and offering help, especially for Professor Odile Heynders and Professor Ad Backus. I also would like to thank Professor (Emeritus) Ben White, who encouraged me to start my academic journey in the Netherlands many years ago. For this reason, I also remember the Institute of Social Studies (ISS), The Hague, where I spent some wonderful time in developing research ability and capacity. I also would like to thank Professor Maribeth Erb (NUS, National University of Singapore), Professor Kathryn Robinson (ANU, Australian National University), Professor Joachim G. Piepke, SVD, and Dr. Vincent Adi Meka (Anthropos Institute Sankt Augustine, Germany). I also want to thank my colleagues in the Netherlands: Professor Gerry van Klinken (KITLV, Leiden), Jan Nielen (CORDAID), Floor Schuiling and Lennard Roubos (Mensen met een Missie, MM), and Ph.D. researchers: Cynthia E. Bejeno, Tamara Saukotta, Cypri Paju Dale, Mas Bayu Wijayanto, Mas Anggun Susilo, Mas. Sunarwoto, Claudia Carvalho, Mas Bowo Sugiarito, Pak Kyai Budi Rahman Hakim, Mas Azis, and Mbak Abell.

I know that it is not easy to obtain information about the situation of the Ahmadiyya group. I got some help from the figures in Indonesia in keeping a proper perspective and a robust passion for dealing with the reality. Their contributions have had a significant impact on the flow of this study until the end. I now want to thank many figures in Indonesia who mainly supported me with information and materials for this research. First, I should mention the Ahmadiyya members and activists—especially Mbak Rizka and Mas Masihudin. They gave me an ‘unlimited’ connection and access to get information. Second, some Muslim intellectuals and activists: Mas Ulil Abshar Abdala (Jaringan Islam Liberal), Mas Ahmad Sueady (Abdurrahman Wahid Center, University of Indonesia, Depok) Mas Riza Ul Haq (Maarif Institute, Jakarta), Mas Zuhairi Mizrawi (Muslim Moderate Society), and Mas Guntur Romli (Jaringan Islam Liberal). Third, some influential persons who are actively involved in human rights advocacy: Professor Frans Magniz Suseno (Driyarkara Institute of Philosophy, Jakarta), Pak Theo Bela (the Christian Community Organization), Mbak Bivitri Susanti (Pusat Studi Hukum dan Kebijakan), Sidney Jones (Institute for Policy Analysis of Conflict), Pak Rafendy Djamin (Human Rights Working Group), and Andreas Harsono (Human Rights Watch).
In the Netherlands, I see so much love in my life. Many people share beautiful memories with me. I always keep in my heart a ‘bright kindness’ from the ‘Setjadiningrat family’ members; Michael—Astri (Escher, their beloved son), Marcel—Viny, Claire—Ronald (Jesse, their beloved son), Jil. They always give me support with sincerity and love. I also want to thank the Indonesian Catholic Church family, Den Burgh—Rijswijk; Om Beny—Tanta Lyana, Om Tom—Tanta Heidi, Om Jiang—Tanta Astrid; and to all Indonesian students, with whom I celebrate weekly mass. I also want to thank Salesian Don Bosco Congregation: Fr. Biju Oledath, Br. Henny Koot, and Fr. Andy Jebarus for friendship and hospitality since my first time in the Netherlands.

I am also grateful to Kak Gaudens Suhardi (Media Indonesia Daily) and also to Harian Umum Kompas Jakarta for supporting me. I also would like to thank Bapa Thoby Mutis, Mama Dewi, Om Frans Paski, and Mbak Dita and the family members in Jakarta. I give my deep respect and thanks to Mgrs. (Emeritus) Hubertus Leteng for his trustful understanding. I also thank Romo Jossy Erot for pray and support. I also thank Boni Hargens for all the of the support and help since my MA study in Jakarta. I also thank Pak Faby Wangkul, Mbak Retno, Pak Doni Nggaro, Pak Nik Decky, Pak Manto Tapung, Pak Kris Anggur, and Pak Bona Onggot, Pak Supar Jelahut, Pak Marsel Payong, Evan Marsidi, and Angelina Yuliana Dwi Cahya. I also want to thank De Gruyter Publisher’s team for their very kind support in finishing and publishing this book, especially Eva Frantz, Aaron Sanborn-Overby, Antonia Mittelbach, and Sophie Wagenhofer.

Finally, I want to show my deepest love to my family members in Manggarai, Flores who are supporting and keeping me in their pray all the time: Viktor Regus (my father)—a retired elementary school teacher—and Theresia Jaira (my mother)—a housewife—who have taught me to be a humble person and hard worker; together with Sakarias Ludu (my brother) and his wife, Veny Sabon (with their two cute daughters Margie and Adne), Matilde Jaiya (my sister) and her husband Peter Daeng (with their two lovely children, Cecilia Regap and Clarino), sister Valeria Daima (my sister) and her husband Ardi Kantur (with their two beautiful boys, Nicholas and Declan).

Now, my dream comes true through the help and love from all of you. Thank you so much.
