Acknowledgements

This study was written with the generous support of the Dutch Research Council under the VIDI-talent scheme,¹ and was defended as habilitation at the Max Weber Kolleg for advanced cultural and social studies at Erfurt University to achieve the Venia legendi for ‘History of Ancient Religions’.

I am grateful to my former supervisor Pieter ter Keurs (the former Head of Collections and Research) and Wim Weijland, the director of the Rijksmuseum van Oudheden in Leiden, for kindly allowing me a 50% research-leave from my curator’s job to focus on my Walking Dead research for a period of five years from 2017. Leiden University gave great support through Ben Haring, Pia Teeuw, and Ab de Jong, although I find it a short-coming of the system that the Rijksmuseum van Oudheden is not eligible for this type of Dutch government research funding. In the early phase of proposal writing, I greatly benefitted from the kind support of Maghiel van Crevel, Ine Goedegebuur, Kick Moors, and Peter Bischop. The application itself was written in fruitful cooperation with Ramadan Hussein and Nico Staring, and we were glad that Huw Twiston Davies joined the team soon after the award. I would like to thank Koen Doncker van Heel and Miriam Müller for helping Nico and me to choose the best-suited candidate to support our Walking Dead team, who were indeed a great pleasure to work with. Pressure surely was sky-high at the start of the project, allowing us to present our first edited volume ‘Perspectives on Lived Religion’ on our second congress at the Ministry of Antiquities in Cairo, and importantly, way before Covid-19 hit us all. I am grateful to His Excellency the Minister of Antiquities Khaled el-Anany for allowing us to host our conference in Cairo and to Hisham el-Leithy for his kind support in organising it – the results shall be published in the PALMA series of the Rijksmuseum van Oudheden in 2023. Great thanks are also due to Rudolf de Jong, Shahdan Ibrahim, Hanieh Pahlavan Bagheri, Marleen de Meyer, and Anne van Leeuwen from the Netherlands-Flemish Institute in Cairo for their tremendous support. Unfortunately, Covid-19 did mean the cancellation of three excavation seasons, which is the reason this study mainly draws on the work of previous excavations led by Geoffrey Martin, Hans Schneider, Maarten Raven, René van Walsem, and Harold Hays, who should also be thanked for their important work at ‘our’ South of Unas cemetery area, as well as Alain Zivie in the Bubastetion, Bodo Ockinga in the Teti cemetery, and Ola el-Aguizy and Tarek Tawfik at the concession of Cairo University. In this respect our neighbours at the Saqqara rest house, the Czech mission, should be thanked for their friendship, gin supply

¹ https://www.nwo.nl/projecten/276-30-016-0

OpenAccess. © 2022 Lara Weiss, published by De Gruyter. This work is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 International License. https://doi.org/10.1515/9783110706833-001 and other medicines (you know who you are!), and their wonderful work organising the Abusir and Saqqara conferences. And in this list of thanks, of course, the various wonderful Egyptian and international members of the Leiden-Turin Expedition to Saqqara should not be forgotten, nor Dr. Nashwa Gaber, the General Director of Foreign Missions Affairs and the members of the Permanent Committee, who kindly provided permission and security to excavate, even though travel turned out to be impossible for most of this project’s time!

With the libraries closed for months because of the worldwide pandemic, I am particularly grateful to the team of the NINO library for allowing us to borrow books, and to Johannes Auenmüller, John Baines, Burkhard Backes, Susanne Beck, Wouter Claes, Simon Connor, Ken Griffin, Mohamed Fahmy, Gehad Mohammed, Rita Lucarelli, Marleen de Meyer, Miriam Müller, Rune Nyord, Daniela Picchi, Joachim Quack, Reinert Skumsnes, Susanne Töpfer, and many others who kindly sent me literature not available to me. Caris-Beatrice Arnst, Ben van den Bercken, Gilles Deckert, Peter Dils, Denise Doxey, Laura Forte, Beatrix Gessler-Löhr, Christian Greco, Anne Herzberg, Sophie Labbé-Toutée, Christian Loeben, Stefania Mainieri, Frank Marohn, Frederic Mougenot, Boyo Ockinga, Anna Pizza, Federico Poole, Vincent Rondot, Sylvia Schoske, and Friederike Seyfried kindly shared information from their respective research, museums, and institutions. Last but not least I am most grateful to Jörg Rüpke for his continuous guidance and support, to my fatherly mentors René van Walsem and Rob Demarée, and to the two other reviewers of my habilitation, Alexandra Verbovsek and Rubina Raja, for their kind feedback on this study. All flaws are mine.