Contents

Acknowledgments — VII

Introduction — 1

1 Disease and the (Un)Making of the World — 11
   1.1 Disease as an Architect — 13
   1.2 Re-reading the clinamen — 20
   1.3 Conclusion — 33

2 Disease, Closure and the Sense of an Ending — 37
   2.1 What’s in a Disease? — 41
   2.2 Sex Can Kill — 51
   2.3 The End of it All — 60
   2.4 Plague and the Suffering Body — 67
   2.5 Conclusion — 74

3 Disease and the Marvellous. Epilepsy in Book 3 and 6 — 76
   3.1 Epilepsy and the Hippocratic Tradition — 78
   3.2 Epilepsy Re-considered — 89
   3.3 Epilepsy, Earthquakes and Volcanic Eruptions. Reinstating the Wondrous in a World of Sickness — 99
   3.4 Epilepsy and the Female in the Paradoxographical Tradition — 108
   3.5 Conclusion — 120

4 From Callimachean Aesthetics to the Sublime. The Plague in Book 6 — 122
   4.1 Lucretius and Callimachean Aesthetics — 123
   4.2 Lucretius’ Plague and Callimachus — 136
   4.3 Lucretius’ Plague and the Sublime — 147
   4.4 Conclusion — 160
   4.5 Appendix — 165

5 Afterword — 173

Bibliography — 175
Index Rerum et Nominum — 197
Index Locorum — 203