Acknowledgements

The present piece of work could not have been realized without the help of many people to whom I am indebted.

First and foremost, I would like to express my deep gratitude to my supervisor Professor Hilary M. Chappell, who has guided, encouraged and supported me, showing endless tolerance of my ignorance and limited knowledge in linguistics and without whom my research could never have progressed this far. It has been a great honor to be her PhD student. Her enthusiasm and joy for research on Sinitic languages has been inspiring and motivational for me. Even though my interest has always been endangered languages, thanks to her, I realized how fascinating and diverse Sinitic languages can be. It is also she who opened the door to a brand-new world of research for me and who led me towards a broader path in my studies.

I would also like to acknowledge Professor Alain Peyraube for his generous advice and support on my thesis, my research papers, and academic activities, as well as on my future career. He enriched my thoughts greatly with his expertise in Chinese diachronic syntax and semantics.

I would like to express my appreciation to my school, École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS), and my affiliated research center, Centre de Recherches Linguitiques sur l’Asie Orientale (CRLAO), for sponsoring my field trips to Xingfa Township in Hezhang county of Guizhou Province in China, and my other academic activities all over the world. My gratitude also goes to Chiang Ching-Kuo Foundation for International Scholarly Exchange (CCKF) for granting me the Doctoral Dissertation Fellowship for the year 2015 (DD027-U-13). It was indeed a great honor. I am also profoundly grateful to the China Scholarship Council (CSC) for granting me the 2019 Chinese Government Award for Outstanding Self-Financed Students Abroad. I acknowledge the Xingfa Township government for their generous accommodation and reception when I was in my field trips. The finalization of this grammar is also financed by the project ‘Caijiahua Yufahua Wenti Yanjiu’ [Investigation on grammaticalization in Caijia] (project number: 41004525/001).

I would like to thank all my consultants, Mr. Li Wentai, Mr. Li Kaiju, Ms. Li Xingzhi, Mr. Chen Weixian and Ms. Zhao Guozhen as well as their lovely families, who kindly taught me the Caijia language and their culture with patience and shared with me their life experiences. Without these data the present grammar could have never been finished.

Living and studying in Paris was a fantastic experience in my life. I was lucky to have many friendly colleagues working together in a lovely office right on the famous rive gauche of Seine at Rue de Lille. I thank, in particular, HE Lisha, with whom I often share my moments of inspiration, for proofreading my draft papers. I also thank Sara Mortaji for her kind offer of polishing my French when I was still an M. A. student in Lyon. I am glad that she is on the path of becoming what she wants herself to be.

I would like to thank Ms. Kirstin Börgen at De Gruyter Mouton, Mr. GENG Mengzhe, Miss ZOU Yidan and Miss LIU Yichen for their editorial help.

A special thanks goes to the Waseda University Library for authorizing me to use the illustration of Caijia as the cover of this book.

Finally, I would like to thank my family for their unconditional support, love and encouragement. I am so lucky to have them.

Thank you all!
