This book is a revised version of a doctoral dissertation submitted and defended in 2019 at the Institute of Philosophy at Osnabrück University. I thank the university and its many staff members who have supported my work and well-being since coming to Osnabrück.

The members of my thesis committee, Susanne Boshammer, Nikola Kompa, Uwe Meyer, Wolfgang Ludwig Schneider, and Torsten Wilholt, made my defense an engaging, pleasurable, and memorable experience, and for this I express my sincere gratitude. Torsten Wilholt’s probing questions and remarks as a thesis referee pushed me to clarify a number of arguments from the original manuscript, and the resulting book is much better for it. Special thanks are in order to my doctoral supervisor, Nikola Kompa, who, besides providing me with a steady supply of insightful and helpful comments and critiques during the process of refining the raw ideas and arguments that ultimately made their way into the book, always went out of her way to provide whatever sort of (context-sensitive) support I needed most during any particular phase of research and writing.

Philosophy, as we like to tell incoming students, is not a spectator sport, nor is it best practiced alone. I have benefited greatly from engaging discussions with many friends, colleagues, and acquaintances over the last years. Even more importantly, each has contributed in their own vital way to creating and maintaining an exceptionally warm, friendly, and spirited working (and socializing!) environment in and around the university: Benjamin Angerer, Lasse Bergmann, Frieder Bögner, Susanne Boshammer, Armin Egger, André Grahle, Gregor Hörzer, Attila Karakuş, Nikola Kompa, Christian Lavagno, Imke von Maur, Uwe Meyer, Asena Paskaleva-Yankova, Andrea Robitzsch, Nikola Ruck, Georgios Sagriotis, Sebastian Schmoranzer, Stefan Schneider, Marion Schultz, Kathrin Schuster, Achim Stephan, Jennifer Wagner, Sven Walter, and Jannik Zeiser.

Parts of this work were presented, discussed, criticized, and ultimately improved in various conferences, classes, and colloquia. Four groups in particular merit special mention for their helpful contributions: the extremely supportive community of researchers surrounding the European Network for the Philosophy of the Social Sciences (ENPOSS), the eager participants of an undergraduate seminar on “Philosophical Aspects of Self-Fulfilling Prophecy” that took place at Osnabrück University in the Winter semester of 2018-19, the consistently sharp-witted members of the Münster-Bielefeld-Osnabrück (MüBiOs) philosophy colloquium, and especially the dear colleagues that make up the weekly colloquium at my home institute, where some of the best qualities of philosophy are regularly on display: rigor without pedantry, critique without scorn, and a conspicuously enthusiastic pooling of creative and intellectual energies with the collective aim of achieving greater understanding.

Finally, I would like to thank my family (on both sides of the Atlantic) for all the love and support they have unfailingly shown me over the years. I regret that my grandparents Richard and ‘Meme’, who taught and supported me perhaps more than anyone else, did not live to see this project completed. Sandra, Lisbeth, and Emil Richard Lowe light up my life, and for that they deserve the greatest thanks of all.
