Acknowledgements

The editors would like to acknowledge a number of individuals and institutions, whose help and support have been invaluable in the conception and completion of this volume. We would like to thank, first and foremost, the two senior editors of Trends in Classics at De Gruyter, Professors Antonios Rengakos (Aristotle University of Thessaloniki/Member of the Academy of Athens) and Franco Montanari (University of Genova), for believing in the value of the work at hand and wholeheartedly supporting its publication.

The editors would also like to thank most warmly the contributors, who have been very patient and helpful throughout the process of putting together this volume, in the face of many rounds of revisions and demands on their time. Indeed, we have been fortunate to work alongside the contributors from our initial inquiries and theoretical meanderings, and we have been delighted to see how those exchanges of initial ideas and outlines have led to the formulation of chapters that will enhance our knowledge and understanding of the features, purposes, texts and contexts of witnesses and evidence in antiquity. It is fair to say that this fruitful and fascinating result of our admirably harmonious cooperation smooths our path and lightens our labours.

Andreas Serafim would like, finally, to thank the Research Centre for Greek and Latin Literature of the Academy of Athens for providing excellent research facilities that make the timely completion of this volume possible; and Millie Gall for reading and commenting on several drafts of the Introduction and of other chapters within the volume.

Abbreviations throughout this volume follow those in L’Année philologique or the Oxford Classical Dictionary. A certain level of formatting standardisation has been imposed to ensure consistency across the volume, but individual stylistic distinctiveness has been respected. The volume is intended for the specialist scholars and graduate students of prose (oratory, philosophy and historiography) and verse (drama) texts. All long quotations of ancient Greek (and Latin) are accompanied by English translation.

Andreas Markantonatos, Vasileios Liotsakis and Andreas Serafim
Kalamata and Athens, June 2021