Acknowledgments

Many are the friends, colleagues, and scholars to whom I am indebted for all the comments, suggestions, and corrections they have kindly provided over the years. It is impossible for me to name them all here, but I would like everyone to be well aware of my sincere and deep gratitude.

I would, however, like to mention Tiziano Dorandi for having introduced me to the important activities of the Project Theophrastus founded by William W. Fortenbaugh in 1979; Riccardo Chiaradonna, Michael Erler, and Emidio Spinelli for their constant support and interest in my research; again Tiziano Dorandi (with Stephen A. White) and Peter Stork (with, again, Tiziano Dorandi, Johannes M. van Ophuijsen, Tazuko van Berkel, Mariska Leunissen, and Dimitri Gutas) for having allowed me to use their editions of the textual reliquiae of Clearchus and Eudemus before publication; Sergio Knipe (and Michael McOsker) for their essential help with the English language. I also wish to acknowledge Flavia Palmieri’s invaluable assistance in preparing the indexes of the volume.

My gratitude also goes to all the libraries and institutions that have facilitated my studies, and the writing and reworking of the following chapters.

My heartfelt thanks also go to Michael Erler again and to the Herausgebergremium of the Beiträge zur Altertumskunde for welcoming this book into the series.

I would like to point out that this volume is the result of research activities carried out within the University Project (Years 2019–2021) Il criterio di verità: Dalla filosofia antica all’epistemologia contemporanea funded by Sapienza University of Rome.

Finally, it goes without saying that I remain solely responsible for any errors, misprints and inaccuracies present in this work.

Rome, November 2021

Francesco Verde

https://doi.org/10.1515/9783110772722-001