Acknowledgements / Remerciements

Reparation, Restitution, and the Politics of Memory was conceived subsequent to an international summer school we organized in Italy in 2021. The volume owes much of its insights and critical thought to the excellent teaching of Olivier Remaud, Aurélie Kalisky, Patricia Oster-Stierle, Markus Messling, Christiane Solte-Gresser, Jonas Tinius, and Angelica Pesarini, many of whom have also contributed a chapter to this publication. The same can be said of the numerous participants, whose competence and dedication made the summer school a place of profound knowledge and radical criticism, some of whom have equally contributed to this volume (Clément Ndé Fongang, Hannah Grimmer, Sahra Rausch, Lucia della Fontana, Fabiola Obame, and Ibrahima Sene). Our thanks goes out to Igiaba Scego, for her crucial intervention in the course of the conference and her support of our idea of translating the short story “L'icona” into French, and to Helena Janeczek and Maike Albath for an inspiring artist talk.

At the same time, the book deliberately exceeds the framework of the summer school, including further important perspectives from a range of scholars, activists, and writers, active both within and beyond university contexts. We thank hn. lyonga for his powerful texts, but also his encouragement and his critical thoughts on the conception of this volume; Kader Attia for his generous support in all stages of this project; Ibou Diop and Alexandre Gefen for the readiness to contribute their thoughts and knowledge. We also thank barazani.berlin and the various associations and NGOs united as Decolonize Berlin for the crucial advocacy work some of them have been doing for decades now, and the numerous discussions that have also informed this volume. It responds to a global contemporary debate, whose innumerable actors, both individual and collective, have shaped our thoughts and whose commitment to material and epistemological decolonization needs to be acknowledged here.

But first and foremost, we want to express our immense gratitude to Markus Messling and Christiane Solte-Gresser, without whom neither the summer school nor this book would have been possible in this way. Taking both schemes on board for his ERC project Minor Universality, Markus Messling facilitated the necessary institutional, financial, and conceptual structure. Christiane Solte-Gresser assisted us throughout the project by providing financial, organizational, and intellectual support. Both of them continuously challenged our reflections on repARATION, and their joint keynote address from 2021 is equally part of this volume. We also thank Freddy Ndi and Tetyana Vorobyova for their tireless help in editing the texts assembled here, and our colleagues at Saarland University who provide the context for our ideas and thoughts to develop.
