Table of contents

Chapter 1  Introduction
1.1. General goals and scope
1.2. A note on methodology
1.3. Outline of the analysis

Chapter 2  Theoretical framework
2.1. Pragmatic principles in conversational discourse
2.2. Types of conversational repair
2.3. Information flow in conversation
2.4. The database

Chapter 3  Other-initiated other-repair
3.1. Introduction
3.2. The prototypical repair process
3.3. Self-repair after attempt at other-repair
3.4. Some interactional variants
3.5. Conclusion

Chapter 4  Self-initiated self-repair
4.1. Introduction
4.2. Interactional analysis
4.3. Prosodic aspects of repair-RDs
4.4. Conclusion

Chapter 5  Self-repair and recoverability
5.1. Introduction
5.2. Inferability of reference
5.3. Referential distance to antecedent 80
5.4. Interference 86
5.5. Conclusion 86

Chapter 6 Right-dislocation and self-repair 89
6.1. Preliminaries 89
6.2. RD as the reflection of conversational repair 95
6.3. Prototype organization: non-prototypical RDs 98
6.4. Repair-RDs versus non-repair-RDs 104
6.5. Prosodic aspects of repair- versus non-repair-RDs 117
6.6. Conclusion 123

Chapter 7 Other-initiated other-repairs 125
7.1. Introduction: On the relevance of other-repairs 125
7.2. Interactional analysis 126
7.3. Information flow and other-repairs 131
7.4. Prosodic aspects of other-repairs 137
7.5. Conclusion 138

Chapter 8 Variant types of anaphor repair 139
8.1. Introduction 139
8.2. Retracing anaphor repairs 140
8.3. Immediate anaphor repairs 145
8.4. Repairs from linguistic zero (“Ø”) forms to NP 152
8.5. Prosodic aspects of variant anaphor repairs 157
8.6. Conclusion 159

Chapter 9 Repairs of non-pronominal forms 160
9.1. Introduction 160
9.2. Interactional types of NP-to-NP repair 161
9.3. Semantic types of NP>NP repair 172
9.4. Infomational status of the reparandum 176
9.5. Prosodic aspects of NP-to-NP repair 182
9.6. Other repair formats (X-to-X repairs) 184
9.7. Conclusion

Chapter 10  General conclusion

10.1. Clarity, Economy and Collaboration
10.2. Information flow in conversation
10.3. Syntactic form and discourse function
10.4. Final remarks and further perspectives

References

Author Index