Acknowledgements

This book contends that creative achievements are more than individual feats. Academic research is, of course, no different. Therefore it is only appropriate to outline the framework in which this research was conducted and to express my thanks to all the people who contributed in one form or another over the past few years.

The PhD research on which this book is based was firmly embedded in social and professional environments, first and foremost in the research project Places and their Culture: The Evolution of Dutch Cultural Industries from an International Perspective, 1600-2000, funded by the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO). My supervisors Maarten Prak and Robert Kloosterman provided and continue to provide inspiration and guidance. Fellow project members Michaël Deinema and Mariangela Lavanga have been of great help.

The Economic and Social History group at Utrecht University and the Posthumus Institute offered inspiring academic environments. My PhD buddy Auke Rijpma was particularly invaluable. Since defending my dissertation, my colleagues in the Cultural Economics group at the Erasmus University Rotterdam, the research project Cultural Transmission and Artistic Exchange in the Low Countries, 1572-1672, and the research programme CREATE: Creative Amsterdam: An E-Humanities Perspective at the University of Amsterdam have provided many inspiring conversations. I especially wish to thank Eric Jan Sluijter, Filip Vermeylen, Julia Noordegraaf, and Lia van Gemert for their support.

My research has allowed me to dive into the wonderful worlds of art and book history, and I thank the many specialists who shared their expertise and who corrected me when necessary. I am particularly grateful to Harm Nijboer and Marten Jan Bok at the University of Amsterdam for their help with the Ecartico database, and Marieke van Delft at the Royal Library, who gave me access to the Thesaurus database of the Short Title Catalogue Netherlands. Neil De Marchi has been incredibly generous in offering to proofread the manuscript. I greatly appreciate his remarks and insights, as well as those by Jessie van den Broek, the peer reviewers of this book series, and the members of the defence committee. At AUP, Inge van der Bijl, Chantal Nicolaes, and Carrie Ballard have kindly guided me through the production process of this book.

And finally, Iwan, Mom, Dad, family, and dear friends, thank you for looking out for me and helping me keep life fun all along the way.
