ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This is the reworked version of my PhD thesis, which I defended in June 2018 at Radboud University Nijmegen. The accomplishment would have been impossible without the support and advice of many people. First, I would like to express my gratitude to my supervisors Eric Moormann and Frits Naerebout. Before becoming a professor at Radboud University Nijmegen, Eric Moormann was one of my lecturers when I studied Classical Archaeology at the University of Amsterdam. He offered me the opportunity to obtain my PhD degree at Radboud University and has seen the project through to the end. I am thankful for his support and confidence. As an expert in ancient history and religion, Frits Naerebout has given me much to think about. His enthusiasm, encouragement and insightful comments motivated me to look at things from different perspectives and to refine my arguments. I owe particular debts to Rien Polak and Louis Swinkels for their advice and close reading of the entire text and for saving me from many errors and inconsistencies. I am also grateful to Wouter Vos for close reading the second chapter, to Wim van Es, for his help with the excavations at Dalfsen, Wijster and Ede, and to Greg Woolf, who put me on the right track at the beginning of my journey.

Financial support for the publication of this manuscript was kindly provided by Radboud Institute of Culture and History and the dr. Hendrik Muller Fonds.

I would also like to express my gratitude to my colleagues and many others who in one way or another have contributed to this book. My special thanks are extended to the staff of museums, archaeological depots and departments in the Netherlands who welcomed me, let me work in their facilities and provided the data and photos I needed. And lastly, I am very grateful to Stephan and Alba Mols for their continuous loving support and patience.
