

ANALYSE & KRITIK

Jahrgang 37 (2015)

Heft 1+2

Contents

Editorial	1
I. Marx and Ethics: Coherent Company?
Martin Jay
Marx and Mendacity: Can There Be a Politics without Hypocrisy?	5
Brian Leiter
Why Marxism Still Does Not Need Normative Theory	23
Raymond Geuss
The Moral Legacy of Marxism	51
II. G. A. Cohen's Development
Fabien Tarrit
G. A. Cohen and Marxism	71
John E. Roemer
Thoughts on G. A. Cohen's Final Testament	97
Jason Brennan
Equality, Community, and Diversity in Cohen's Socialist Ideal	113
Julian Culp
G. A. Cohen, Constructivism, and the Fact or Reasonable Pluralism	131
III. Marx and Liberalism
Jeffrey Reiman
A Theory of Marxian Liberalism	149
John Christman
Freedom in Times of Struggle: Positive Liberty, Again	171
James Sterba
Libertarianism on the Brink	189
Jan Narveson
Sterba on Liberty and Welfarism	203
James Sterba
A Response to Jan Narveson: Why Libertarians Are and Are Not Like Turnips	223

IV. Repercussions

Karl Widerquist and Grant McCall

Myths about the State of Nature and the Reality of Stateless Societies 233

Christopher Craig Brittain

Horkheimer, Religion, and the Normative Grounds of Critical Theology 259

Michael Howard

Exploitation, Labor, and Basic Income 281

Gijs van Donselaar

In Company of the Funny Sunny Surfer off Malibu: A Response to Michael

Howard (and Some Others) 305

Authors 319