

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Articles

Han Liu

Two Faces of Self-determination in Political Divorce 355

Notes & Essays

Laith K Nasrawin

Towards the Establishment of an International Constitutional Court 386

Seung Ju Bang

Constitutionality of the Agreement between the Foreign Affairs Ministers of the Republic of Korea and Japan on the Issue of 'Comfort Women' on 28 December 2015 400

Eszter Bodnár

All Voters are Equal but... 425

Developments Austria

Anna Volgger

Special Topic: Establishment and Unconstitutionality of Political Parties 439

Developments CEE

Simona-Maya Teodoroiu & Marieta Safta

Special Topic: Procedural Rules and Practices Grounding the Decisions of the Constitutional Court of Romania 445

Vakhtang Menabde

Georgian Constitutional Court: The System of Legal Capacity of Natural Persons and its Impact upon the Georgian Legislation 458

Aim and Scope

The Vienna Journal on International Constitutional Law is dedicated to the advancement of legal knowledge in the field of International Constitutional Law. By linking various perspectives the Journal endorses an approach towards a coherent understanding of International Constitutional Law and preparing the ground for novel answers to the challenges of a changing global legal framework. Connecting different systems of Constitutional Law on a national and international level allows to explore the tension and the congruence, both within and between constitutional networks, and to further discuss and develop appropriate solutions.

The Journal aims to provide a forum for critical discussion on topics of International Constitutional Law focusing on recent developments in National Constitutional Orders and in Public International Law as well as on questions in the field of Legal Theory. Advised by a body of international referees the Journal features high-standard contributions by scholars and legal professionals from around the globe. Furthermore, the Journal monitors constitutional developments in CEE, particularly by assessing select case law of National High Courts.

The Vienna Journal on International Constitutional Law addresses the global scientific community, scholars and researchers in various disciplines working in the field of International Constitutional Law. Moreover, the Journal provides information on comparative constitutional developments, relevant to practitioners as well as academics.