Editorial Note

With the anniversary issue 30–2, the thirtieth volume of Probus is complete. We are happy to unite in this issue six papers on varying topics written by eight outstanding scholars in Romance linguistics. In their contributions to this anniversary issue, the invited authors show that theory-oriented research is not only very much alive, but also convincingly necessary and we hope that they will inspire the debutants in the field to pursue the objective of Probus, which is to encourage problem-oriented research that combines a solid empirical basis with the insights provided by modern theoretical approaches.

We thank Ana Arregui, Ricardo Bermudez-Otero, Eulàlia Bonet, Richard Kayne, Maria-Rosa Lloret, Eduardo Raposo, Maria Luisa Rivero, and Luigi Rizzi for having made of this anniversary issue a very interesting and important one.

On behalf of the Probus Editors,
Leo Wetzels
