

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The splendid collections of Gail Unzelman, whose generosity is acknowledged in the dedication to this book, were invaluable to me throughout, but particularly for the information they provided for the chapters on Husmann and Morgan. I have leaned heavily on the books of Charles Sullivan, the unrivaled master of American wine history, and have profited from his review of the manuscript. The librarians, without whose willing help no book of this kind can be written, that I would like to thank include in particular Axel Borg, in charge of the Amerine Room, and John Skarstad, in Special Collections, both at the Shields Library, University of California, Davis. Robert Zerkowitz was my guide to the rich archives of the Wine Institute, San Francisco. John Barden, great-grandson of Paul Garrett, and his wife, Polly, generously opened their impressive collection of Garrett memorabilia to me and enabled my account of Garrett by giving me a copy of Garrett's unpublished memoir. To all, and to the many unnamed others, my best thanks.
