CONTENTS

Introduction: Race, Redistribution, and the Politics of Crime Control
1. What Do People Believe Causes Crime?
2. Brainstorming Responses to Crime
3. Public Preferences for a Crime Prevention Budget
4. How Framing Affects Public Investment Preferences
5. The Political Boundaries of Public Support for Safety Beyond Punishment

Conclusion: Toward a Twenty-First Century Politics of Crime Prevention

Acknowledgments
Appendix: Research Methodology
Notes
Bibliography
Index
About the Author